$1¼ Billion Programs for Housing Face 82d Congress

Proposed Measure Follows General Lines of Postwar Federal Policy

By Thomas Winship
Post Reporter

A billion-dollar private defense housing program and a 250-million-dollar public housing program are now scheduled to go to Congress in January, it was learned last night.

The Housing and Home Finance Agency is authoring the legislation. It will follow the general lines of World War II and immediate postwar Government housing policies which featured liberal Federal-insured building loans.

The program of special incentive aids to private builders and the publicly-financed housing would go into operation only in specially designated defense areas under the proposed bill.

It could produce an estimated 100,000 housing units, officials said.

The new plan would appear to run counter to the recently issued Regulation X. That set of regulations was designed to curb drastically housing credits by increasing down payments and shortening pay-off periods on home purchases.

A top HHFA official explained the apparent incompatibility this way, and gave this welcomed tip-off to homebuilders.

Regulation X credit curbs, he said, undoubtedly would be relaxed in the defense areas where the new program's easy-money financing would go into effect.

"The purpose of the new program is to boost the volume of rental housing in critical defense areas—and do it quickly," he said.

As presently proposed, the new legislation for private building will follow the general pattern of so-called Title 6 of the Housing Act of 1934.

The private builder would receive benefits similar to Title 6 of the Housing Act of 1934 which terminated last spring. The incentives include mortgages, backed by the Government up to 90 percent, on large-scale rental developments (section 608) and individual homes (section 602).

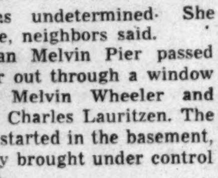
Woman, 87, Saved From Home Fire

Three Montgomery County policemen rescued an unconscious 87-year-old woman from the smoked filled kitchen of her burning home at 713 Ritchie ave., Silver Spring, early today.

The woman, identified as Mrs. Elizabeth Erner, was given first aid on the scene and rushed to Washington Sanitorium. Her condition was undetermined. She lived alone, neighbors said.

Policeman Melvin Pier passed Mrs. Erner out through a window to Sergt. Melvin Wheeler and Policeman Charles Lauritzen. The fire which started in the basement, was quickly brought under control by firemen.

Turn Those "Extra Mouths" Into Extra Money



Your dog's puppies or your cat's kittens may be just "extra mouths" to you, but they would make welcome Christmas gifts to most children.

So why not sell these pets to gift-buying parents, through a want ad in The Washington Post.

An Alexandria woman placed a small ad in The Post, offering a wire-haired terrier for sale. As a result of the ad she got eight calls, and sold the dog at her own price.

The extra money will be mighty useful to you in your own Christmas shopping, so why not call NAtional 4200 and place that ad right now.

St. John's Students Can't Agree On Action to Keep Out Coeds

ANNAPOLIS, Dec. 12 (AP).—Ugh! women! is the cry at St. John's College, firmly entrenched as a male stronghold for over 250 years.

The unbelievable news fell like a bolt of lightning on the masculine students last night: Unless a miracle happens, the present 165 students will be joined by 50 girls next fall. Just fodder for the Naval Academy middies, was the general concensus. There are 3700 midshipmen only a few blocks away.

So tonight, a student meeting was called to talk over the impending tragedy.

A movement to abandon the Student Politi, self-governing organization of St. John's, was defeated in a vote, with only 10 of the 95 assembled voting for abandonment.

The idea of dropping the organization was sparked by student bitterness over the administration plan to admit girls.

Some of the students said there was no use having a Politi—that they got only vague answers from the administration when the question of co-eds came up.

What's worse, the men lamented, what will happen to our serious discussions—probably turn into hen parties.

Last night they trooped out of the auditorium shaking their heads in disbelief, but they haven't given up yet. The meeting tonight was directed by the student Politi. Last night's meeting was called by President Weigle.

The meeting "got to the point where it wasn't making any sense," said a college official.

"It was right hot," he added, "but several of the boys seemed to do all the talking just because they liked to stand up and use big words. Others who had more to say didn't get a chance."

St. John's has been strictly for males ever since its inception as King William's School in 1696. Among its graduates, it counts such illustrious men as Francis Scott Key, author of the "Star-Spangled Banner."

One student's main gripe is that he was not asked for his opinion on the matter.

Dr. Weigle's reply was that the matter was purely an administrative one.

Reports indicate that the alumni are strictly divided on the subject. An official said some 200 graduates who studied at the college after inception of a new program of study showed disfavor with the coeducational scheme.

Since 1937, the St. John's curriculum has been based on a study of 100 books by the greatest authors of Western culture.

Adonis Risks Citation for Contempt

Crime Probe Witness Evades Questions About His Activities

By The Associated Press

Joe Adonis, already accused in two States as a big-shot gambler, risked a contempt of Congress citation yesterday by bluntly turning back questions by the Senate Crime Investigating Committee about his activities.

He said his answers might incriminate him. He told his questioners that he is under bond on gambling charges in New York and New Jersey, and understands the Government is checking into his income-tax returns.

Under those circumstances, Adonis explained suavely, he does not intend to "help the Government prosecute me."

Committee Chairman Kefauver (D., Tenn.) informed the witness he had "no alternative" but to seek a citation for contempt. The Senator had served similar notice on a previous uncommunicative witness, Salvatore Moretti of Demarest, N. J.

Adonis, dapper in a dark brown suit, rejected question after question about his business. Guardedly, he said he is 49 years old; is not a Sicilian; has read of the Mafia Society but doubts that it exists; has never been in the narcotics or liquor business; moved from Brooklyn to Palisades, N. J., in 1944 "because I liked the climate better there."

Under coaxing, he finally admitted that he does not employ a chauffeur.

But—he flatly declined to say whether he was associated in any way with gambling houses in New York, New Jersey, Florida or Nevada; whether he had anything whatever to do with gambling; if he was engaged in any legitimate business; or how he earned his living. He declined to list his net worth or his real estate holdings.

Adonis also refused to answer any questions about a slip of paper containing two columns, "in" and "out," each listing such nicknames or abbreviations as "Doc"

Reply to Plea for Prayer Day

Angry Letter by Truman Hits 'Low' Tactics in '50 Campaign

By The Associated Press

President Truman, the trigger-tempered letter writer, has dashed off another one—deploring the "low" state of politics in the recent campaign.

It was addressed to Representative Hebert (D., La.), a States' Righter and critic of the Administration, who promptly replied that this display of "political distemper" was regrettable.

It all started December 5 when Hebert wrote asking the President to appoint a day of prayer that Providence would endow officials with the wisdom and courage to make the right decisions in the present world crisis.

In a two-paragraph reply on December 7, Mr. Truman called attention to his Thanksgiving proclamation urging prayers for peace, and said he believed that "effectively answers your suggestion."

The President then added:

"I am extremely sorry that the sentiments expressed in your letter were not thought of before November 7, when the campaign in your State, Utah, North Carolina, Illinois and Indiana was carried on in a manner that was as low as I've ever seen and I've been in this game since 1906."

In a rejoinder on December 8, Hebert wrote Mr. Truman:

"I am stunned by the contents of your letter of December 7 in reply to my letter of December 5.

"It is indeed exceedingly re-

BULLETIN

TOKYO (Wednesday), Dec. 13 (AP).—Sea evacuation of United Nations forces from northeast Korea presumably was under way today. Associated Press Photographer Max Desfor flew over the evacuation fleet Tuesday and reported transports and freighters were being loaded with men and material.

TOKYO (Wednesday), Dec. 13 (AP).—All fighting forces of the United States Tenth Corps in northeast Korea have eluded Chinese Communist traps and pulled back to the coastal area, a field dispatch indicated today.

"Every U. N. fighting man in northeast Korea is now jammed into the snow-splotched coastal flatlands," AP Correspondent Stan Swinton reported from that sector.

Guns of United Nations warships are in position to cover vast areas of those flatlands.

Swinton's report came from a front where widely scattered forces of the Tenth Corps have been withdrawing, many under the cloak of military secrecy, to escape more than 100,000 Chinese Reds.

"Abandoned to the enemy are the Korean cities whose liberation was trumpeted in a long series of optimistic communiques," Swinton said.

The dispatch did not say outright that the Seventeenth regimental combat team of the United State's Army's Seventh Division had reached safety. But the Seventeenth last had been reported far up in the mountains at the Manchurian border.

So did the Republic of Korea (ROK) Capital and Third Divisions whose activities have not been mentioned in recent official war summaries.

The Seventeenth's last officially pin-pointed position was far from the coastal flatlands. The combat team had arrived at the North Korean border, capturing Kapsan and then moving into the border city of Hyesanjin, across the Yalu River from Manchuria.

Swinton mentioned Hyesanjin and Kapsan among the cities given up. The precise whereabouts of the Seventeenth Regimental combat team has been a well-guarded secret ever since it was ordered to withdraw more than a week ago.

Division Was Near Siberia

Swinton's reference to the abandonment of Chongjin and Songjin inferentially traced the also secrecy-cloaked pullback of the ROK Capital Division along the east coast. Until it got pullback orders, the division had pushed north to within 40 air miles of the Siberian border.

The ROK Third had operated inland from the Capital Division.

"The Chinese have disappeared—just as they did before their last drubbing offensive drive," he said.

This quiet was in marked contrast with fierce resistance by the

U. S., Britain Back Step for Cease-Fire

LAKE SUCCESS, Dec. 12 (AP).—The United States and Britain today indorsed a proposal by 13 Asian and Middle Eastern countries for the United Nations to see if there can be a cease-fire in Korea. The United States, however, barred any political decisions on the Far East until a cease-fire is in full effect.

The proposal was laid before the U. N. Assembly's political committee by India's Sir Benegal N. Rau. Rau told the delegates China apparently is moving toward a Monroe Doctrine for the Far East. He said also that Red China's Ambassador here, Wu Hsiu-chuan, had told him Peiping wants peace.

The doctrine laid down by President Monroe in 1823 said the United States would regard as an unfriendly act any interference by Europe in the affairs of independent American states.

The committee adjourned at 1:09 p. m. until Wednesday (10:45 a. m.) so several delegates could obtain instructions on the cease-fire idea.

If the resolution is approved, Assembly President Nasrollah En-

Contempt Tag Sought Despite Court Ruling

Action Asked Against 2 Union Chiefs by Representative Walter

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

A one-man House un-American Activities subcommittee yesterday moved to cite for contempt two reluctant witnesses identified as key members of the Communist Party here.

Representative Francis E. Walter (D., Pa.) said he would ask the full committee to cite Roy H. Wood, 36, of 1517 Wisconsin ave. nw., chairman of the local Communist Party, and Robert Paul, 40, of 5345 Ames st. ne., identified as a Communist liaison man with the AFL Building Laborers Local 74 here.

Walter said there was no doubt in his mind that the contempt citation against the two witnesses, who refused to answer any question linking them with the Communist Party on the ground that their answers would tend to incriminate them, would be valid despite Monday's Supreme Court decision.

The Nation's highest court unanimously ruled that the Constitution gives a witness "the privilege to remain silent" when questioned about the Communist Party or connections with it, if they plead self-incrimination.

Representative Walter, however, observed that the Supreme Court decision involved a witness who had refused to testify before a grand jury, which has the power

Chest 'Emergency' Campaign Tempo Reported Picking Up

Community Chest leaders reported yesterday that the tempo of the eight-day "emergency drive" for $887,000 is "picking up."

The total collected since last Friday's report meeting reached $27,274 yesterday—an increase of more than $5000 over the Monday figure.

The MEtropolitan 6262 campaign is not only bringing in pledges by telephone, said Executive Director Edward J. Keyes, but is stimulating contributions by other means.

Keyes reported that both firms and individuals have reviewed—then increased — their contributions because of the all-out campaign.

Radio, television and newspapers have been plugging the MEtropolitan 6262 number intensively.

The drive for $887,000—enough to put the 1951 Chest goal of $4,260,000 over the top—began last Sunday and will continue through next Sunday.

Its importance to the community is that the Chest's responsibilities in the coming year will be increased due to the Korean crisis. The 1951 Chest goal was originally $4,100,000, but was expanded last September to provide a special fund "for the armed forces and other services related to the emergency."

The Chest estimates that with the goal obtained, it could aid 284,000 people in the Washington area in 1951—including 34,000 servicemen and their families.

Yesterday's collection leaves the goal $859,725 short—and for every $15 not collected, aid will have to be withheld from one person in 1951.

From 9 a. m. to noon today, Paul Hume, music critic for The Washington Post, will answer MEtropolitan 6262 calls.

Red Feather Christmas Can Be Made Easy

For those who were missed by Community Chest solicitors—and for those who already have given but want to give more—there's a quick, convenient way to make this a Red Feather Christmas.

During the emergency drive, call MEtropolitan 6262 at any hour of the day or night for the rest of this week. A volunteer Community Chest worker will pick up your donation at your convenience.

Truman Sets 'Emergency' Broadcast

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

President Truman will make a radio address to the Nation Friday or Saturday night on Administration plans to meet the world crisis with a giant build-up in munitions production and defense mobilization.

Before those plans are crystallized, however, the Chief Executive will discuss them with 20 top parties at the White House this morning.

A high White House official said Mr. Truman will withhold a decision on proclaiming a state of national emergency until he has discussed it with congressional leaders. It was a foregone conclusion, however, that most of them will be eagerly in favor of some pronouncement to galvanize the Nation out of a business-as-usual attitude—particularly if the pronouncement is accompanied by concrete action.

The White House disclosed that Mr. Truman would make a radio speech later this week. A member of the Cabinet, who asked reporters that he not be identified, told them that the President was aiming for Friday night, hoping his audience would be at its largest then.

Today's unusual conference will be comprised of leaders of both political parties in both houses of Congress, plus the ranking Republicans and Democrats of the major committees in the present defense crisis.

One of the conferees, Chairman George (D., Ga.) of the Senate Finance Committee, predicted yesterday that a declaration of national emergency would be a forerunner of wage and price controls, by January at the latest.

Selective controls on certain individual industries and articles would, it seemed clear yesterday, be imposed by that time. General ceilings, however, probably cannot be administered until some months later.

The first individual control, it was believed, would follow another meeting to be held here today. This is between representatives of the Nation's auto makers and Alan Valentine, director of the Economic Stabilization Agency, and Michael V. DiSalle, the Price administrator.

The officials had asked General Motors and Ford to suspend recently announced price increases, but the companies refused. Coming to Washington today, they appear to be arriving at precisely the time when there is an inexorable demand for some price control action—quick.

The prospect was that they would be ordered to return to the 1950 prices, and that the other companies would be obliged to hold their present prices.

Action on other controls—the civilian use of scarce materials—that will follow a redesign of defense production goals appeared yesterday to be dependent, at least in its timing, on how soon the Defense Department places contracts.

In the meantime, however, the National Production Authority is proceeding to curtail most of the metals in common use. Yesterday it disclosed it is planning to reduce civilian use of pig tin by about 25 percent, in action similar to that already taken for aluminum and copper.

The NPA's decision on tin was made known to representatives of the metal can and closure (bottle and jar tops) industry. They were also advised that the NPA is considering measures to conserve other critical materials used in containers.

Former U. S. Employe

Man Sends Check For Funeral, Then Drowns in Bathtub

Aaron A. Jessee, 60, mailed a check to Gawler's funeral home with instructions to pick up his body at his apartment and have it cremated.

By the time the letter arrived yesterday, the former Government employe had been found drowned in his bathtub in apartment 1124 of 705 18th st. nw.

Homicide Squad officers said Mrs. Eugenia Seegar, resident manager of the apartment house where Jesse had lived for 20 years, reported she sent a porter to his apartment yesterday after she had telephoned and received no answer.

The porter, Leon Coates, entered the apartment and found a note on the dresser. It was addressed to Mrs. Seegar and contained details of how to dispose of his affairs and personal effects, police said.

It also told Mrs. Seegar he was "sorry to do this in the apartment house," but he "just couldn't go on."

Mrs. Seegar then recalled that the apartment engineer had noticed all of Jesse's family albums and books in the trash Saturday. She said Jesse, who lived alone and wore a heavy brace on one leg, gave the porter a batch of letters to be mailed Monday.

Police were unable to determine immediately where he worked, but Mrs. Seegar said she knew it was with the Federal Government. The coroner withheld a certificate of death, pending an autopsy today.

Going to Europe

Eisenhower To Get Reins By Christmas

By Ferdinand Kuhn
Post Reporter

Western European governments can look forward now to getting the Christmas present they want—the appointment of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower as supreme commander of a combined North Atlantic defense force.

The gift wrapping on the present will be a pre-Christmas visit to Europe by Secretary Acheson, bringing assurances that the United States will redouble its efforts to hasten and strengthen western European defenses.

The State Department announced that Acheson would fly to Brussels next Sunday for a two-day meeting of North Atlantic foreign ministers and defense ministers. Army Secretary Frank Pace, jr., will fly with him in place of Defense Secretary Marshall.

Press Officer Michael J. McDermott said President Truman himself had suggested the Acheson visit to Brussels after having learned of "encouraging" progress toward the formation of a combined defense force.

The "encouraging" word came

75% Increase In Strategic Planes Planned

Emphasis Will Be Placed on Jets Able To Carry A-Bombs

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

America's strategic air force will be expanded about 75 percent under the buildup to 84 groups, USAF officials said yesterday.

The emphasis will be on fast jet medium-range bombers—the A-bomb-carrying Boeing B-47s—in this enlargement of the Nation's aerial "Sunday punch," The Washington Post was reliably informed.

This stepping up of the Strategic Air Command, which will be paralleled by an even greater enlargement of the Air Defense Command, will get under way in earnest next summer, it was disclosed. During the remainder of this fiscal year, the great stress is on creating an effective Tactical Air Command to support Army ground forces.

The 48 groups that were in existence when the Korean fighting started, according to official testimony, were divided as follows among the Air Force's three major roles: Strategic air power, 20 groups; air defense, 12 groups; tactical air, 16 groups. The 20 SAC groups included three Convair B-36 groups, 12 Boeing B-29 and B-50 bomber groups and five strategic reconnaissance groups.

Few of the 16 groups listed as tactical were assigned to the close support of ground troops and trained regularly as such. The total included six troop carrier groups, one light bomber group and one tactical reconnaissance group while the rest were fighter or fighter-bomber units. The two SAC fighter groups that were in existence last summer were counted as either air defense or tactical aviation—which, it is not clear.

In the expansion from 48 to 68 groups this fiscal year, the Air Force has pulled in five Air National Guard groups and four Reserve groups. All five of the Guard units had been assigned to

Inductions Stepped Up At Request Of President

January, February Quotas Are Nearly Doubled in Move For Quick Action

By Melvin Altshuler
Post Reporter

The Department of Defense yesterday raised the monthly draft calls for January and February to 80,000—the Nation's largest calls since the end of World War II.

The January quota was 40,000. February's was 50,000.

Army manpower spokesmen said the increase is "in line" with the President's recent statements that military strength must be built up faster.

Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, Selective Service director, said last night that "we ought to have enough to make these calls."

The manpower source, Hershey said would consist of single, nonveterans without dependents, in the 19-to-26 age group.

Despite the fact that the January call was doubled, Hershey continued, enough men already have been examined to provide a pool for the month's quota.

He said Selective Service machinery might have to be tightened so that the February quota could be realized. Draft officials estimate it takes 60 days from the time "greetings" are received until the draftee can be inducted.

Previous to the increased calls for January and February, November's national quota was the highest with 70,000. The December call was 40,000; October and September quotas were 50,000 each.

The increase to 80,000 for January and February—that is, a total call for both months of 160,000—will bring the number of draftees since the start of the Korean crisis to 370,000 men.

The January and February quotas for the District, Maryland and Virginia will not be announced for several days at least. Presumably, they will be increased in proportion to earlier calls.

On this mathematical basis, the District's January and February calls would range about 350 for each month. Virginia's would range about 1700 each month, and Maryland's 1000 or more each month.

Gen. Hershey last night pointed out that the Nation will have a larger group of eligible 19-to-26-year-old men when the 1951 school year is finished.

At present, draft-eligible college students may ask for postponement of induction until the end of the school year.

Possible changes in the present draft classifications were outlined by Hershey in these categories:

Married men—They can be inducted by the granting of a Presidential order.

"I don't think," said Hershey, "that we will have to take them at this time."

Veterans—They can be inducted only if current draft legislation is changed or if Congress declares a state of emergency or declares war.

The age group—The 19-to-26 classification is set by law and can be changed only by legislation.

Wholesale Price Of Eggs Here Falls 10 Cents a Dozen

The wholesale price of grade A eggs in the District slumped yesterday by 10 cents from the high levels of last week.

The local price break was part of a national plunge. In New York and Philadelphia, the price went down 15 to 16 cents a dozen; in Chicago, 5 cents. Chicago's wholesale price last week was 75 cents a dozen—the highest in at least 30 years.

WOUNDED in ACTION:

Army Second Lieut. George A. Millener, formerly of 7514 Rhode Island ave., College Park, Md. Army Pfc. Floyd C. Stewart, 1369 Savannah st. se. Marine Corpl. Phillip M. A. Pezzella, son of Mrs. Carmen Guerico, 2633 Connecticut ave. nw. Marine Chief Warrant Officer Dee Robert Yancey, 4721 4th st. nw. Marine Capt. Harvey W. Gagner of Sperryville, Va.

Stories of death and heroism continue to come into the Defense Department about Washington area men serving in Korea.

Yesterday the department totaled its current list of area casualties — one dead and five wounded in action. Another fatality came from Falmouth, Va.

The dead man, Marine Lieut. Harvey A. Goss, 23, had been wounded twice before he met his death on November 29. His wife, Betty Kostakos Goss of 306 West Willow st., Falls Church, Va., said he received a shrapnel wound in the head on September 19, and another in the leg in October. Neither was serious and he returned to the fighting.

A native of Brockton, Mass., he attended schools in Whitman, Mass., and in 1945 he enlisted in the Marine Corps when he was 17. He saw service in China in World War II.

Commissioned in 1948

Goss was commissioned in June 1948 at Quantico, Va., and was married in December of that year. His wife did not know any details of his death.

Former Maryland University student, who led his men to safely although wounded himself, was among those wounded in action.

Army Second Lieut. George A. Millener, jr., 23, suffered wounds to his right hand and right leg on November 21, while leading his platoon on a contact mission.

Millener graduated from the university in June of this year. In July, he married the former Shelley M. Schaffer, who also graduated in June from the university. He went on active duty in August. His wife is now living with her father, Col. W. Harold Schaffer, Military Attache at Havana, Cuba.

A Defense Department telegram on December 6, informed Mrs. Gladys M. Yancey, of 4721 4th st. nw., that her Marine husband had been wounded.

A warrant officer, Dee Robert Yancey, 35, has been in the Marine Corps for 15 years. He saw service with the First Marine Division in the South Pacific during World War II.

Army Pfc. Floyd C. Stewart, 19, husband of Mrs. Barbara J. Stewart of 1369 Savannah st. se., was reported wounded in his right leg and lower back. Through a Defense Department telegram, dated December 5, Mrs. Stewart learned that he had been hospitalized in Pusan, Korea.

Born here, Stewart served with the 187th Regiment, Eleventh Airborne Division in Japan from September 1948 to May 1949. After returning to the United States he was stationed at Fort Meade, Md., and Camp Pickett, Va. On August 7 of this year he left for Japan again, being assigned to the Fifth Regimental Combat Team, Second Infantry Division.

Marine Corpl. Phillip M. A. Pezzella, 20, son of Mrs. Carmen Guerico of 2633 Connecticut ave. nw. was wounded in his leg. In a letter dated December 4, he said that his injuries were nearly healed.

Army Pfc. Arthur E. Truslow, jr., 18, of Falmouth, Va., died of wounds in a field hospital, his parents learned yesterday from a Defense Department letter.

The young soldier, assigned to the Seventh Regiment, First Division, died on December 4. He joined the Army in 1948.

He is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur E. Truslow, and two brothers.

The Defense Department also listed Marine Capt. Harvey W. Gagner of Sperryville, Va., as wounded in action.

Decoration Is Voted For UN Korea Forces

NEW YORK, Dec. 12 (AP)—U. N. forces in Korea were voted a special decoration today by the General Assembly in a plenary meeting.

The vote was 38 to 5, with two abstentions, for the award of a distinguishing ribbon or other insignia for personnel participating in Korea in defense of the principles of the charter of the United Nations. The Soviet bloc opposed, with Yugoslavia and Syria abstaining.

Veteran 'Shanghaied' By Navy, He Charges

An Air Force veteran who signed up in the Naval Reserve in 1947 for what he intended to be only a flight to Havana complained yesterday that he had been "shanghaied."

Phil Brewer, a Miami insurance man, poured out his hard luck tale in a letter to The Washington Post, asking if anything can be done for him. He wrote from the Norfolk Naval Base, where—clad in bell-bottom trousers and a sailor's flat-hat—he has just been assigned to sea duty.

Like many another reservist called to active duty, Brewer wants out. Unlike others in the same boat, he says he didn't know he was on the Navy rolls until called in a few weeks ago.

Brewer declares he got into his present fix by going for a flight with his roommate — a Naval Reserve flier — back in May, 1947. At the Naval Reserve base in Miami he was told that he'd have to become a member of the Naval Reserve to make the trip.

"Having served over three years in the Army Air Force with 28 months of it on South Pacific rocks," he writes, "I wanted no part of a Naval Reserve status. But, upon being assured that I could write a letter requesting to be discharged from the Reserve and that it would be honored without strings, I signed the necessary papers.

"Shortly thereafter, I wrote a brief note requesting that my name be canceled from the Naval Reserve rolls . . . Hearing nothing further from the Navy, I assumed that my request had been complied with and gave the matter no further thought.

"In October this year, the roof fell in on me . . . I was ordered to report to the Navy for active duty."

"I've written to Congressmen," Brewer says. "I've talked to naval officials. Blank stares and no answers."

The only thing he was told, Brewer went on, is that the Navy knew nothing about his letter asking discharge. He hints strongly, however, that someone did him a dirty trick. As evidence, he cites that his record at Norfolk shows that he was transferred from the active to the inactive reserve at "almost the identical time" he wrote asking discharge.

'Evidently my letter had been received, but instead of complying with my wishes, the Navy saw fit to either misconstrue or ignore it," Brewer declares.

Naval spokesmen at the Pentagon said there is no record of Brewer ever requesting discharge. They say that Bureau of Personnel files show that he was enlisted as an Aerographer's Mate, 3d class, in May, 1947, and called in last month. In order to have been given a petty officer rating in '47, it was said, Brewer would have to have proved he was qualified for it.

And as for the "suspicious" switch from the active to the inactive reserve, that is "routine," said the spokesman. All reservists are first enrolled in the active reserve so that any necessary payments for travel, etc., can be legally paid, and then are transferred to the inactive branch.

Has Brewer any way out of his present predicament? The Navy says he can officially apply for discharge, citing his reasons. They don't say what action will be taken.

Cairo Cheers Bid to Play Off East vs. West

CAIRO, Egypt, Dec. 12 (AP).—Parliament tonight applauded a deputy's proposal that Egypt make agreements with Communist-bloc nations and use these agreements to pry concessions from the Western Powers.

Soliman Abdel Fattah, a member of the ruling Wafdist Party, advanced the proposal. He spoke in debate on King Farouk's recent throng speech, which asked that Britain withdraw her troops from the Suez Canal zone and get out of the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan.

Applause also had greeted an assertion by Wafdist Deputy Ibrahim Talaat Monday night that Egypt should recognize Communist China and establish an accord with "the Soviet Union and all Eastern-bloc nations."

Government Ministers joined in a general demonstration after Talaat spoke and his statements were displayed prominently today in Cairo newspapers.

Abdel Fattah also recommended diplomatic recognition of Red China. He said the Egyptian government should "tear down the iron curtain which Britain has erected around Egypt."

"It should reach political, economic and military agreements with the Eastern bloc," he said. "These agreements with the other camp may stimulate the Western bloc to give Egypt its demands (for withdrawal of the British).

"Britain and America are frightened whenever the Eastern bloc is mentioned. Why shouldn't Egypt use agreements with the Eastern bloc as bargaining points?"

The Suez and Sudanese situations are now being discussed in London by British Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin and Egyptian Foreign Minister Mohammed Salan Eddin. Farouk's speech threatened cancelation of the British-Egyptian defense treaty of 1936 if British troops were not withdrawn from the canal zone.

Free Life Policy Of $10,000 Urged For Servicemen

A House veterans subcommittee recommended yesterday that the Government give every serviceman free life insurance protection of $10,000.

No more new national service life insurance policies would be sold under the subcommittee's proposal, except to men unable to buy commercial insurance because of ailments incurred in military service.

NSLI policies now held by 5,600,000 veterans and servicemen would not be affected. Reinstatement rights of former policyholders also would be retained.

However, men who enter service hereafter or who now are in service but don't have NSLI policies would be covered automatically.

Dismissal Urged For 8 Teachers In N. Y. Red Case

NEW YORK, Dec. 12 (U.P.).—Eight public school teachers were found guilty today of insubordination in refusing to tell whether they were members of the Communist Party.

Special Trial Examiner Theodore Keindl recommended that all the teachers be discharged "forthwith." They were suspened without pay last May 1.

One of the teachers, David L. Friedman, was said to be a member of the Communist Party after a lengthy Board of Education trial, at which Kiendl presided.

In a supplemental report, Kiendl held that Monday's Supreme Court ruling did not apply in Friedman's case. The high court held that a witness cannot be forced to answer the question of Communist affiliation if he pleads possible self-incrimination.

"The respondent here was not under subpena, nor was he sworn as a witness," Kiendl held. "The respondent here was a teacher in the public service being interrogated by his superiors regarding his qualifications for continuance in that position. In refusing to answer regarding his membership and activities in the Communist Party, he did not do so upon the grounds of self-incrimination."

Indo-China Forces Beat Off 'Strong' Attacks Near Hanoi

SAIGON, INDO-CHINA, Dec. 12, (U.P.).—Communist-led Viet Minh rebels stabbed through mountains and plains around the northern capital of Hanoi today shooting up villages and attacking French outposts.

A French headquarters spokesman here described the assaults as "strong", but he said they all were repulsed.

He said the rebels struck anew at two fortified villages near Hai Duong, 30 miles east of Hanoi. It was in this area—in the heart of the Red River delta—that the Reds launched four separate attacks over the weekend and captured one small outpost. Their other three assaults had been beaten back.

Hai Duong is midway between the port of Haipong, on the railway linking the two cities.

Other Viet Minh bands hit two French posts 25 miles northwest of Hanoi. The rest of Tonkin province, on the border of Communist China, was "calm", the spokesman said.

United Press Staff Correspondent Sol Sanders reported from Hanoi early in the day that the first fleet of planes carrying 900 French women and children from embattled Tonkin province had taken off for Paris. Authorities had ordered all women and children to leave the danger zone.

Chinese Threaten Flank of Eighth Army

Reds during the two weeks that a 25,000-man U. S. Marine-Army escape force battled out of a series of enemy traps from Changjin reservoir to the Hamhung-Hungnam area on the east coast where a U. N. evacuation fleet was waiting.

Only Patroling in West

Quiet also was reported in west Korea today except for patrol actions—largely by South Koreans against bypassed North Koreans near the thirty-eighth parallel.

One of these was 10 miles north of Chunchon. There three Red groups of 1100, 600 and 800 were engaged by South Koreans who had air support.

American and South Korean patrols continued to operate north of the thirty-eighth parallel, United States Eighth Army headquarters reported.

The Far East Air Force reported that its raiders attacked Communist convoys north of the thirty-eighth parallel last night.

The convoys—as usual—were trying to operate under cover of darkness. A Communist train was attacked by light bombers at Sinanju which is on the Chongchon River, 40 miles north of Pyongyang.

Other light bombers raided Pyongyang's air field.

Eighth Army sources said today there has been no positive identification of Chinese Red forces any farther south of Pyongyang than five miles. Air reports have disclosed several columns farther south but their identity—whether Chinese, Korean Reds or refugees—was not definitely established.

Although a fog of security blotted out most troop dispositions, it was believed here that the United States Eighth Army now retains only a toehold north of the thirty-eighth parallel.

Air power remained the only United Nations offensive weapon over most of North Korea.

General MacArthur's headquarters in a war summary said the Reds were "advancing slowly with the center of the mass increasingly veering toward the center of the Korean peninsula."

Red China had a vanguard of 27 divisions—nine armies—now on the war fronts at the head of the one million men it has committed to the Korean campaign.

Headquarters said the Reds were taking advantage of a period of "no contact" to reinforce and re-supply their ground forces from bases in Manchuria, the "privileged sanctuary" to the northwest.

Giving Up North Korea

AP Correspondent Don Whitehead, back from the western front, said that while U. N. forces have not yet given up North Korea entirely to the enemy "this prospect appeared to be imminent."

Whitehead said the vast erea between the thirty-eighth and thirty-ninth parallels—a belt 60 miles deep extending roughly 180 air miles across Korea from east to west—was a "clouded" zone. No one could say just how solidly this area has been occupied by the Chinese, or in what numbers.

Whitehead added the Chinese have lost any chance of trapping the Eighth Army north of the thirty-eighth parallel—an arbitrary boundary line which divided the Communist north from the United Nations-sponsored Southern Republic from 1945 until June 25, 1950.

North Korean invaders breached the line at 11 points last June to open the bloody Korean war.

Red troops—possibly Korean guerillas—were rocketed and firebombed Tuesday near Chunchon, eight miles south of the thirty-eighth parellel on a road and rail center only 44 miles northeast of Seoul, the Republican capital.

Australian Mustang fighters carried out the attacks only 200 to 300 yards away from United Nations positions.

Other Allied warplanes for the third straight day raided Haeju, the Yellow Sea port on the west coast, just north of the thirty-eighth parallel. Haeju is only 62 air miles northwest of Seoul, about 100 unidentified Reds were strafed there.

Eight Russian-built MIG-15 jet fighters streaked over North Korea in a five-minute air battle with four U. S. F-80 Shooting Star jets. One MIG was damaged in the scrap over the northwest frontier town of Sinuiju.

One Shooting Star was lost during the day, the Air Force announced, but did not say when or how.

AP Correspondent Stan Swinton flew over the abandoned port of Wonsan on the northeast coast and reported Chinese or Korean guerilla patrols had entered the city.

A great stream of refugees was in flight from Wonsan. Offshore, U. S. destroyers poured intermittent rounds of shell fire into the former base.

Some 50 air miles to the north, another swarm of civilian refugees was diverted from Hamhung and Hungnam.

The last band of Marines to fight through the jaws of a Chinese death trap below Changjin Reservoir, 60 miles northwest of Hungnam, told AP Correspondent Tom Lambert that refugees worried them more than the enemy.

The rearguard Leatherneck unit said that "quite a few Chinese" were among a throng of 4000 refugees trailing the Marines when they pulled out of Koto.

The refugees were on the heels of the retreating Marine company. "If they had overrun us we would have been finished," said one Marine machine-gunner.

When the Marines fired warning shots over their heads, the "refugees" fired back.

The number of Army casualties suffered by the Thirty-first and Thirty-second Regiments of the United States Seventh Division, which also were in the trap with the Marines, have not been officially c timated. Correspondent Jack Macbeth who saw small elements of these outfits reach Hagaru at the start of the bloody 12-day withdrawal battle, estimated casualties ran 50 percent.

No decision has yet been announced on evacuation of all U. N. forces from northeast Korea. Informed quarters in Tokyo considered this a strong likelihood, however. Transports were at hand to carry out the movement if such a decision is made. The United States Third Division, the Marines and Seventh Division elements were concentrated there.

For the Eighth Army on the western front there was no immediate access to a good evacuation port. Inchon, the port for Seoul, is considered unreliable because of 32-foot tides.

Some 10,000 by-passed Korean guerillas menace the supply route to Pusan at the extreme southeastern tip of Korea, but port facilities there are good. The supply route has been held firmly by U. N. forces.

A NEW THREAT—The new United Nations defense line (A), somewhere near the thirty-eighth parallel in western Korea, faces the possibility of a flanking movement by Chinese Red forces (B) massing in central Korea. In the northeast, meanwhile, the United States Tenth Corps held on to a bridgehead in the Hamhung-Hungnam area (C) as an evacuation fleet stood by. Chinese Reds were reported near Wonsan (underlined), abandoned by United Nations forces, as United States destroyers poured shells into the former base

Seagrave Takes Stand, Denies Aid to Rebels

RANGOON, Burma, Dec. 12 (AP). Dr. Gordon S. Seagrave, American surgeon on trial for treason, took the witness stand today and denied he gave aid to Burmese rebels as the prosecution charged.

Seagrave testified that Sao Hom Pha, Hsenwi chieftain, had assured him that Kachin rebel chief Me Naw Seng and his men were in Namkham, the site of Seagrave's hospital, "for a legitimate purpose." He was led to believe, he said, that Naw Seng was there for conferences that would lead to the termination of the Karen rebellion.

Navy Rocket Test For Record Fails; New One Planned

WHITE SANDS, N. M., Dec. 12 (AP).—The Navy failed in a rocket altitude record attempt today and is preparing for another test in the spring.

A spokesamn said the next missile to be fired probably will be larger than the American-built Viking which fizzled in today's shoot. The launching is scheduled for sometime in March.

Dr. Milton Rusen, expert in charge, declined to amplify the Navy spokesman's reference to a bigger rocket.

Automatic controls shut off fuel of a 5½-ton Viking sent aloft from the White Sands proving ground at 12:05 a. m. (MST) today after 65 seconds of powered flight.

As a result it climbed only 68 or 69 miles. The record for a single stage rocket is 114 miles by a rebuilt German V-2 fired here December 17, 1946. An American Wac corporal launched from a V-2 in flight soared 250 miles above the earth February 24, 1949.

Commons Told Attlee Hopes 8th Will Hold

London, Dec. 12 (AP).—Prime Minister Attlee said today he has good hopes that United Nations troops will hold out in Korea and is completely satisfied with President Truman's position on the use, or non-use, of the atom bomb.

Before a wildly chering House of Commons, he reported on his man-to-man talks with Mr. Truman, and said Britain and the United States are ready at any time to enter with Russia into "genuine discussions" aimed at resolving East-West differences.

The Prime Minister was closeted with King George VI and later with his Cabinet soon after his plane landed in London. Then he hastened to The Commons.

"As far as the use of the atomic weapon is concerned," he said. "I can tell the House that I was completely satisfied by my talk on this subject with the President. I ask the House to accept my assurance that there is no difference of opinion between us on this vital matter."

But conservative leader Winston Churchill asked Attlee to amplify "on the use of the atomic bomb and any control or consultation which we may share in such a matter."

Attlee indicated he may give further details of this and other aspects of the talks in debate Thursday.

It was believed Churchill again raised a later private meeting with Attlee on the question of the bomb.

Churchill said in the Commons in making his request for more information, "I certainly feel some clearer definition of the position on this extremely important issue should be before us when we debate the question on Thursday."

"On Korea and the Far East," Attlee told the House, he and Mr. Truman "agreed on the immediate course which our representatives at the United Nations should follow.

"We were agreed that aggression must be halted and we were equally certain that every effort should be made to prevent an extension of the conflict."

He added that "our long range objective is to reach a stable position in the Far East."

His confidence in the ability of U. N. troops to hang on in Korea was based on "a very full account of the military situation" from Gen. Omar N. Bradley and Maj. Gen. J. Lawton Collins.

The only point of difference in the attitude of Britain and the United States, he said, is that over recognition of Communist China. Britain has recognized it. The United States balks at such a step.

Attlee said he did not expect this difference to be ironed out in such brief talks.

Brooklyn and Texas Get in the Same Act

LONDON, Dec. 12 (U.P.).—The Daily Mail printed a cartoon today picturing Prime Minister Clement R. Attlee standing in Texas-League boots, with 10-gallon hat in hand, cigar in mouth, saying:

"Wall folks, I been away quite a piece, I guess—and it sure is mighty fine to be back here wid youse guys on dis li'l ol' island."

Foreign Units In Korea Must Quit, Reds Hint

MOSCOW, Dec. 12 (AP). — Reports in the Soviet press give the impression today that the only cease-fire in Korea acceptable from the Soviet viewpoint is one which would be accompanied by quick removal of all foreign military forces and personnel.

(The Russians have made it plain in the United Nations that they do not consider the Chinese Communists as foreign military forces. They apply the term only to United States and United Nations personnel.)

During the past few days the Soviet press has published extensive reviews of the Korean fighting. All picture the Americans and Allied forces as having suffered a military catastrophe of major magnitude, of having fled from North Korea in panic without heavy armaments, and facing annihilation by the North Koreans and Chinese in the near future.

This was capped today with publication of a declaration by North Korean Premier Kim Il Sung ordering his forces and those of the Chinese Communists to push the American troops into the sea.

He directed his fighting men not to give the Americans any time to regroup, but to obtain final victory now.

Partisan (guerilla) forces were instructed to cut off the enemy retreat by attacks in the rear.

Fast Passage Seen For Civil Defense Bill

Passage of a national civil defense bill by the House before Christmas was predicted yesterday by Representative Chatham (D., N. C.), chairman of an Armed Services subcommittee considering the measure.

The group hopes to have the bill ready for full committee action on Friday. Chairman Vinson (D., Ga.) has indicated he favors passage at the lame duck session.

A Senate Armed Services subcommittee also will begin working on the bill today.

May Be Curtailed

It appears likely the powers of the civil defense administrator may be somewhat curtailed from the Administration draft of the measure. Millard F. Caldwell, jr., Florida governor, holds the administration post under an executive order and would take over the position set up by Congress.

The Administration plans to ask Congress for 83 million dollars to run the new agency the rest of this fiscal year. This request will be sent to the Hill as soon as the authorization bill is passed. A much larger request—up to $3.1 billions—will be asked in the 1952 budget in January.

U. S. Would Pay Cost

The bill would have the Federal Government pay all the cost of such things as air raid alerting systems for the cities. The District Commissioners have asked for $337,500, the bulk of it for a city-wide alerting system, but a House Appropriations sub-committee already has voted to do nothing this year. More favorable Senate action is likely, however, with a compromise reached.

Meanwhile, a Senate Public Works subcommittee at 10 a.m. today will consider President Truman's 190-million-dollar plan to build eight Government dispersal centers in nearby Maryland and Virginia.

Chairman Whittington (D., Miss.) of the House Public Works Committee said yesterday his committee may decide to let the proposal wait until the new Congress next year.

To Discuss Segregation

How to end segregation in District schools will be discussed by the Washington Chapter, Americans for Democratic Action, Thursday at 8:30 p. m., Pierce Hall, 16th and Harvard sts. nw.

Takes Command

U. S. Army Photo

. . . takes over command

Col. James T. Duke yesterday took over command of Fort Myer, succeeding Col. James V. Cole.

The formal changeover took place in front of post headquarters as troops representing all the units at Fort Myer stood by. A soldier from the Third Infantry's Company A presented Mrs. Cole with a bouquet of flowers as the Army Band played "Auld Lang Syne."

After taking a language course at Monterey, Calif., Colonel Cole will become Military Attache at the American Embassy, Lima, Peru.

Colonel Duke is not new to the post. As a captain he commanded Troop E of the Third Cavalry in 1934. After promotion to major in 1935, he served as post adjutant there.

Born in California, Md., in 1893, he was commissioned second lieutenant in 1917 after graduating from the University of Maryland. He held various cavalry positions until 1942 when he was assigned to the Army Ground Forces intelligence section at Fort McNair, he said.

In 1943 he was given a temporary rank of brigadier general while commanding Charleston, S. C., port of embarkation. Later he held a similar post in Yokohama, Japan. He was transferred to Europe in 1947 when he was named personnel officer of the Office of Military Government in Berlin until May 1949 when he became post commander of Berlin, he said.

In July of this year he assumed his duty as assistant to the Inspector General at the Pentagon, a position he leaves to become commander of Fort Myer.

The colonel lives at 3547 Fessenden st. nw., but will move to Fort Myer soon.

Kennedy Declares Foreign Policy Morally Bankrupt

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., Dec. 12 (AP).—Joseph P. Kennedy, former Ambassador to Great Britain, said tonight our foreign policy is "suicidal" and "has made us no foul-weather friends."

Kennedy also charged that United States foreign policy has "solidified communism," sapped our economic strength, failed to provide a strong defense in this hemisphere, and is "politically and morally a bankrupt policy."

He proposed that the United States get out of Korea and any other place in Asia where we cannot hope to hold our defense, and to stop wasting our resources in an idle attempt "to hold the line of the Elbe or the line of the Rhine."

Mongolian Cavalry Dashes Onto Korea Scene; Supplies Are Carried by Camel Train

TOKYO Dec. 12 (AP).—Two divisions of mounted Mongolian cavalry, with camel caravans for supply, were identified in North Korea by General MacArthur's headquarters today.

The announcement did not say whether the Red horsemen were from Inner Mongolia, a northwest territory of Red China, or Outer Mongolia, the first Oriental country officially set up as a Communist "People's Republic."

The Mongolian cavalry divisions were located in northeast Korea and in the central-western sector. They were estimated at between 4000 and 7000 men each.

"They are extremely mobile and capable of traversing the roughest terrain," MacArthur's announcement said. "Their Mongol ponies are accustomed to the extreme low temperatures and biting winds of the Mongolian plateau."

Mongols Cruel Killers Of Many Conflicts

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 12 (AP). Two divisions of tough Mongolian cavalrymen among the Chinese Communist vanguard in Korea, are fighting in their own element.

Accustomed to the bleak plains and howling winds of the Mongolian plateau, they were raised to the life of a nomad and a fighter.

They were operating over ground stained red by illustrious ancestors. The great mogul conqueror Genghis Khan subdivided Korea in 1218 and a half century later his grandson Kublai Khan, at the head of another army, did it again. Until the first World War Genghis had been the world's worst killer, being held responsible for 10 million deaths.

As recently as August, 1945, shaggy little Mongolian ponies galloped again through Manchuria into Korea, carrying their stocky, high cheekboned masters to battle with the Japanese.

Mongolian banner-men—most of them fierce Buryat tribesmen—then were attached to Russia's Second Ukrainian Army. It was the Soviet armored force sent from Stalingrad and eastern Europe to crush the Japanese Kwantung Army and occupy Manchuria and Korea down to the thirty-eighth paralled.

The fighting lasted little more than one week in 1945—the last week of World War II.

The Mongolis terrorized Chinese civilians in Manchuria. They were dreaded more than even the Soviet "long-noses" as the Chinese called the Russian troops.

Then, as now, long lines of civilian refugees poured out of the cities, towns and villages to avoid contact with the long-robed, high-booted Mongol cavalrymen.

And with the refugees came tales of no-quarter ferocity in battle.

The sack of Mukden in September, 1945, following its capture by the Red army was attributed by Chinese civilians largely to these wiry cold-blooded little men.

The Mongolians wore durable sheepskin-lined winter uniforms. Their tightfitting civet skin or beaver skull cap, pulled down over ears and nose, gave them an even wilder aspect. They were crack shots, even when riding at full gallop.

For centuries fighting has been a way of life to these sons of the great khans.

In recent times the Mongols have fiercely resented the mass migration of Chinese from south of the Great Wall into territory they considered their own.

For the same reason they bitterly but ineffectually opposed the Japanese entry into fertile Manchuria in 1931.

It was not too hard to convince independent-minded outer Mongolia to tear away from weak Chinese sovereignty and proclaim itself a "peoples republic" of the USSR several years ago.

Airmen's reports that Mongolian cavalrymen in Korea refused to break rank under low-level strafing and rocket attack is typical of these Buddhist troops. Their unquestioned bravery more than once has led them into mass slaughter in battle. They had the solace only of dying happy—in a fight.

Holy Year Jubilee to Extend To Rest of World Through '51

VATICAN CITY, Dec. 12 (AP).—The Roman Catholic Holy Year jubilee is to be extended through 1951 to all the rest of the world after its close here Christmas Eve, Vatican sources disclosed today.

Pope Pius XII is expected to issue a papal bull Christmas Day proclaiming officially the extension to all parts of the world except Rome.

The extension will give those of the more than 400,000,000 Roman Catholics who were unable to make the pilgrimage to Rome an opportunity to gain the Holy Year's spiritual benefits, the Vatican sources said.

The current jubilee is the twenty-fifth in the church's history of nearly 2000 years. At the last such jubilee in 1925 the same extension to the rest of the world was arranged. In the closing ceremonies, the Pontiff will seal the holy doors of St. Peter's basilica with the same silver trowel with which he opened them last year.

At the same time, cardinal delegates will close the holy doors at three other Roman basilicas—St. John Lateran, St. Mary Major and St. Paul Outside the Walls.

Vatican sources estimate that more than four million Catholics have made Holy Year pilgrimages this year. There were 350,000 participants in the 1900 jubilee and 582,000 in that of 1925.

Jobless Total In District Drops Steadily

Unemployment here is dropping.

The District Unemployment Compensation Board yesterday reported they sent out 11,220 jobless benefits checks worth $200,477 in September and 10,246 checks totaling $181,669 in October.

The downward trend in unemployment also was emphasized by a recent statement by the United States Employment Service that Washington has become one of the Nation's tightest labor areas, with not quite 3 percent of its working force unemployed.

On November 1, USES said, 19,662 persons were listed as seeking jobs. As of October 1, there were 20,102 job hunters.

A USES official said Washington became a tight labor area as far back as August, when its available labor force dropped from 3.2 percent to 2.9 percent of the total.

British Papers Hint Mao's Army a Ghost

LONDON, Dec. 12 (NYHT).—Veiled attacks on Gen. Douglas MacArthur and hints of sinister goings on in Korea in the military sphere suddenly appeared in British newspapers today. The articles, sent by British correspondents with Commonwealth forces, referred to "Mao's ghost army" and said British forces had not seen the enemy for a week.

The reuptable Manchester Guardian carried this headline over one such article: "British In Korea suspect talk of Chinese 'Hordes.'"

The article said in part: "British staff officers frankly confess that they are puzzled by the way the United Nations' withdrawal has been conducted. They believe that, with the well-trained, stubborn troops available, a firm line might have been established around Pyongyang and Chinnampo that could have wrested the initiative from the Chinese . . . The British troops are supremely confident that they can handle almost anything the Chinese can throw at them."

A British officer was quoted as saying, "Friction between ourselves and the Americans is growing."

The "Daily Mirror" correspondent said "the full story cannot yet be told but the fact must be recognized that incessant withdrawal without fighting is bound to cause a certain amount of bitterness between the various national groups in the Eighth Army."

The story continued: "The whole war has become peculiar. At lunch time I was invited by the Northumberland Fusilliers to go pheasant shooting . . . The Ulster Rifles, with whom I spent the afternon, were cheesed off because they had passed through villages where the whole population is being bumped off by Korean police. And they had seen Korean students being bombed by friendly planes because they wore black tunics like those of the Communists.

"Whatever the Chinese may or may not do, this has become a dirty, nasty business."

Articles in a similar vein appeared in two or three other London morning newspapers. A war office spokesman refused comment and said "we have had no operational inteligence on the recent fighting in Korea."

Draft Broad Members 'Fired' by Hershey

WOLF POINT, Mont., Dec. 12 (U.P.).—Two "mutinous" members of Roosevelt county's draft board were fired tonight by Gen. Lewis B. Hershey after they expressed unwillingness to draft any more men until the atomic bomb was dropped in Korea.

The two are Chairman Beldon Reid Taylor and member Carl B. Floman. They had sent a resolution to Montana's congressmen criticizing the present Government for sending troops "too poorly equipped, and too few in number," to fight in Korea.

Labor Wins Test On Coal Policies

LONDON, Dec. 12 (AP).—Britain's Labor government tonight beat off a sharp Conservative attack on its coal policies by a margin of 14 votes.

After a five-hour debate, Commons rejected, 298 to 284, a Conservative Party motion calling for an "outside impartial inquiry" into the government's operation of the nationalized coal industry.

By that same count, the House approved a government-sponsored amendment lauding the Laborites' efforts to meet the nation's coal needs.

HERO'S WIDOW—Mrs. Leslie Coffelt receives a gold medal and a certificate from President Truman. Looking on is Pvt. Joseph O. Davidson, White House guard, who also received a medal at ceremonies yesterday

The six White House guards who beat off an attempt on his life November 1 were formally honored yesterday by President Truman.

One medal and certificate for bravery were presented to the widow of a White House policeman killed at his post. The other five went to the men themselves, while their wives and children looked on. Receiving the awards were:

Mrs. Leslie Coffelt, 1915 N. Wayne st., Arlington, widow of the slain policeman.

Pvt. Donald T. Birdzell, 42, of 4937 New Hampshire ave. nw., who was shot in both legs and stood leaning on a stick at yesterday's ceremony.

Pvt. Joseph H. Downs, 44, of 10620 S. Dunmore dr., Silver Spring, who was wounded in the head and body.

Pvt. Joseph O. Davidson, 3925 W st. nw.

Secret Service Special Agents Floyd M. Boring and Vincent M. Moroz.

Mrs. Coffelt, sobbing quietly into her handkerchief, first received the medal after Secretary of the Treasury Snyder read the commendation. Then each was presented with the award in turn.

Stronger UMT System Urged By New Citizens' Committee

Growing Russian defenses against the A-bomb require the adoption of universal military service and the creation of a big "army-in-being," a committee of leading citizens agreed yesterday.

The newly formed "Committee on the Present Danger" launched a drive for legislation requiring every male American to serve two years in the armed forces upon graduation from high school or when he reached 18.

Dr. Vannevar Bush, president of the Carnegie Institute of Washington, and Dr. James B. Conant, president of Harvard University, told reporters at a press conference announcing the committee that America must act swiftly to meet the "real and present danger."

Situation Changing

Speaking for the 25-man group of industrialists, college heads and leading citizens in other lines, they declared that Selective Service and the proposal for six months to a year of universal military training are not sufficient for present needs. Mobilization of American resources, as well as manpower, also was urged.

Bush, wartime head of the Office of Scientific Research and Development and postwar research chief at the Pentagon, said he agreed with Winston Churchill that our possession of the A-bomb has been the "chief deterrent to a full-scale Communist attack."

But the development of radar networks, guided missiles, proximity fuses and jet planes is slowly altering this situation, Bust said.

"At some time, perhaps in five years," he added, "Russia can build a defense that will make the attrition so great that planes would have difficulty reaching primary targets. . . .

"At that time, we must have other means of stopping the Russian armies—namely an army-in-being in Europe."

That is the reason that the committee is concentrating first on Universal Military Service, Bush said. Both he and Conant made it plain that they believed the prior plan for universal military training did not meet present day needs.

Under UMT, youths would train for six months in a special corps and then enter the National Guard, Reserve, ROTC, etc. They would not be in the armed forces while taking their basic, full-time military training and could not be sent into actual military service overseas.

That was aimed at building up the reserve forces in a period of less tension, Conant said, while now the need is for men available for service anywhere.

Petagon Consulted

Under the proposal of the "Committee on The Present Danger"—which is not yet organized in detail—the physically unfit would be drafted for "clerical service," unless absolutely unemployable. It calls for an armed force of at least 3,500,000 men.

Former Undersecretary of the Army Tracy S. Voorhees, said the group has discussed its program with Pentagon officials and, while he could not speak for all of them, "a considerable ground of common understanding" exists. Vorhees has opened Washington offices for the group at 711 14th st. nw.

Sweden's King Asks Increased Allowance

STOCKHOLM, Dec. 12 (AP).—Gustaf VI, who has been Sweden's King only a little more than a month, asked Parliament yesterday for a raise of $38,000 a year.

Calling Parliament's attention to the devalued currency rate, he asked that his annual allowance be increased from 995,000 crowns (193,000) to 1,200,000 crowns ($231,000)—a boost of 20 percent.

F.D.R. to Joseph Stalin (Cablegram)

THE WHITE HOUSE
March 24, 1945.

Personal and Secret from the President to Stalin:

Ambassador Gromyko has just informed the State Department of the composition of the Soviet delegation to the San Francisco Conference.

While we have the highest respect for Ambassador Gromyko's character and capabilities and know that he would ably represent his country, I cannot help being deeply disappointed that Mr. Molotov apparently does not plan to attend.

Recalling the friendly and fruitful cooperation at Yalta between Mr. Molotov, Mr. Eden, and Mr. Stettinius, I know the Secretary of State has been looking forward to continuing the joint work in the same spirit at San Francisco for the eventual realization of our mutual goal, the establishment of an effective international organization to insure a secure and peaceful future for the world.

Without the presence of Mr. Molotov the Conference will be deprived of a very great asset. If his pressing and heavy responsibilities in the Soviet Union make it impossible for him to stay for the entire Conference, I very much hope that you will find it possible to let him come at least for the vital opening sessions.

Since all sponsoring powers and the majority of other countries attending will be represented by their Ministers of Foreign Affairs, I am afraid that Mr. Molotov's absence will be construed all over the world as a lack of comparable interest on the part of the Soviet Government in the great objectives of this Conference.

F.D.R. to Isador Lubin in Washington

THE WHITE HOUSE,
March 16, 1945

Dear Lube:

"It" is going to Warm Springs and I am made very happy by "it." "It" will be doled out with extreme care and will not be interred in the library.

Incidentally, the guns are a real addition to my artillery at Hyde Park and I am thinking of calling the library the "Franklin D. Roosevelt Arsenal."

Ever so many thanks for thinking of me.

As ever yours,

Dr. Isador Lubin, an O. P. M. economist who was at this time special statistical assistant to the White House, had brought back "it" from Europe—"real English gin" which Robert Murphy had dug up. The "guns" were a German Luger, and a little revolver with an inscription from a Belgian manufacturer, a friend of Lubin, who had represented Belgian employers in the International Labor Organization, to which Lubin was the United States representative.

F.D.R. to James F. Byrnes in Washington

THE WHITE HOUSE,
March 25, 1945

Dear Jimmy:

I was, of course, knocked off my feet yesterday when you told me you felt you ought to resign this spring instead of on V-E Day. I am distressed but I, in part, appreciate your reasons. It will be, of course, next to impossible to find anyone to substitute for you.

Give me a few days more to decide between Fred and the General—and I will try to see the General, if you could bring him in next Thursday morning.

My inclinations are toward Fred, as he is such an old friend, but if we shifted Fred at the present time, we would have to find somebody else to handle the loans.

You have certainly done a grand job under very great difficulties—pulling your weight in the boat to the satisfaction of everybody. I just hate to have you go. I shall miss you and Maude more than I can tell you, but be sure before you take up anything else to get a real bit of rest.

As ever yours,

On March 23rd Byrnes wrote F.D.R. that he intended to resign as head of the Office of War Mobilization and Reconversion. "Fred" was Judge Fred M. Vinson, who had succeeded Byrnes as head of the Office of Economic Stabilization. The "General" was Lucius D. Clay, who had been assigned to Byrnes by the War Department. Byrnes was very enthusiastic about his abilities, but told F.D.R. that the War Department had selected him to head the American occupation in Germany.

F.D.R. to Harold L. Ickes in Washington

THE WHITE HOUSE,
March 27, 1945

Dear Harold:

I have won a great victory! I, too, have an invitation to the Gridiron Club Dinner on April fourteenth and I am told they have at last abandoned white weskits, white ties, and full dress suits. This is a great moral victory for me. It has taken twelve years to attain it.

Unfortunately, I shall be away on April fourteenth. I hope that your absence from the dinner will not weigh on your mind too greatly.

As ever yours,

Ickes said that he had been invited to the Gridiron Club dinner, but would decline unless F.D.R. were going and wanted the support of his friends.

F.D.R. to Josephus Daniels in Raleigh

THE WHITE HOUSE
April 3, 1945

Dear Chief:

I do not think there is much use in delaying the independence of the Philippines and McNutt has said nothing to me about it. I would much like to have it go into effect on August 13th—their Fourth of July—and to go to it myself, but I fear I cannot get away for the latter because it looks now as if there will be some kind of a European conference.

I do wish you could have been in my office the other day when Jonathan was sworn in. He is a grand person and so is his wife. He is making a real hit with the Press.

I hope to see you soon.

Affectionately,

At his last press conference on April 5th, at which President Osmena was present, F.D.R. stated: "We are absolutely unchanged in our policy of two years ago, for immediate Filipino independence." Jonathan Daniels had become F.D.R.'s press secretary.

F.D.R. to Frank Murphy in Washington

WARM SPRINGS
April 9, 1945

Dear Frank:

I am down at Warm Springs, "off the record," for a few days and while I want to see you again it may not be for several weeks, as I have to go to the opening of the Conference in San Francisco.

With my warm regards,

Always sincerely,

Justice Murphy wrote that he would like to see F.D.R. if he had a moment to spare. Roosevelt died three days after writing the note to Murphy.

Exiled Governor of Sinkiang Says Russians Control Area

CAIRO, Dec. 12 (AP).—The exiled governor of west China's Sinkiang Province, who fled last year before invading Communist troops, says the Russians now have complete control of that area.

The former governor — Emir Mohamed Amin Bogra—made this statement, basing it on information leaking out of Eastern Turkestan, in an interview here.

Now living in Srinagar, Kashmir, he arrived in Cairo recently after making the Moslem pilgrimage to Mecca.

Russian Advisers Dominant

Bogra said all government departments in Sinkiang now have Russian "advisers." Following ratification last January of the Soviet-Red China treaty, he said, the Russians gained control of all mineral resources of Turkestan as well as other Chinese provinces. They direct extraction of eastern Turkestan's mineral and oil riches, with special emphasis on uranium, he added.

"The secret police are everywhere," said the gray-bearded Emir. "People are enrolled in forced labor teams. They are put to work on airports, roads and on the new railway linking Russian and Chinese Turkestan. All members of the Nationalist Party of eastern Turkestan (which he said he organized in 1945) are in jail. According to recent information I have received, some 200,000 people in east Turkestan are in prison. Communists have closed all Moslem religious schools and confiscated all WAKF (estates administered under Moslem law) properties. These have been re-distributed to Chinese Communists."

But Bogra maintained that anti-Communist guerilla forces have organized in east Turkestan under the leadership of Osman Batoor Yolbas Bey. He estimated the anti-Red guerillas in northwest China at 40,000—mostly Moslems.

Atom Bomb Urged

Bogra said he fled his country after Chinese Communist rule, "backed by Russian influence which had infiltrated into the province for some time," took over his homeland.

"One thousand people crossed into India with me," he said. "Other thousands followed later."

The former governor said the East and West must unite to create an "overwhelming force," if world Communist expansion is to be stopped. He said the West should use the atom bomb in its present fight against communism.

"I believe the use of the atomic bomb would be a practical means to stop the Red menace," he declared, "even if it leads to World War III. When a limb is infected it must be cut out, lest the infection spreads to the rest of the body."

Modified GOP Stand On Acheson Studied

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

A Senate GOP subcommittee yesterday considered a modified resolution calling for the ouster of Secretary of State Dean Acheson but delayed final action on a tentative draft.

A revised draft of the resolution, in the form of a letter to President Harry Truman, was discussed in the subcommittee but members stamped "top secret" on its contents.

Hanging fire for a week, the Republican "Oust Acheson" demands, brought to a head by Senator Irving M. Ives (R., N. Y.) were rapidly becoming a party hot potato with wide differences over how to proceed, if at all.

Party extremists, meanwhile, threatened to force a Senate Republican conference on the issue if the resolution is by-passed by the subcommittee and to fight in the conference to "strengthen" the resolution.

Following yesterday's closed meeting of the four-man drafting subcommittee, Chairman Ives said only that the new draft "broadens" the subject matter in the original resolution and is less "pin pointed" on Acheson.

In other quarters it was learned that the resolution still calls for Acheson's resignation, however. The new material said to have been added hits State Department leadership generally in the present crisis and calls for consultation with Republicans before the President announces foreign policy decisions.

The four members of the subcommittee agreed to take copies of the revised draft home with them for further study before meeting again at 5 p. m. this afternoon for possible action.

Besides Ives, author of the original Acheson ouster resolution, members of the subcommittee include Senate Republican Leader Kenneth S. Wherry (Nebr.), Senator Eugene Millikin (Colo.), chairman of the full Senate Republican conference, and Senator H. Alexander Smith (N. J.).

The subcommittee was plainly divided on the original resolution. While Ives and Wherry had announced for it, Senator Smith opposed any party move to single out Acheson. Millikin is believed to have also lined up against the original proposal.

Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York, meanwhile, had issued a statement warning Republicans against criticism of our foreign policy in the present crisis.

Yesterday Senator George W. Malone (R., Nev.), one of the right-wing Republicans clamoring for a showdown on Acheson, hit back at Dewey.

Malone put out a statement saying Dewey's comments did not represent "the views of Republicans generally."

"To suggest that United States Senators and Representatives withhold expressing the people's opinions regarding the actions of any Government official is to suggest that we abandon our responsibility to the people who elected us," said Malone.

Senator Joseph R. McCarthy (R., Wisc.) indicated he and some other Republicans would offer amendments in the Republican conference demanding Acheson resign if the subcommittee draft fails to call for his ouster.

Pending a GOP showdown, Democrats generally declined comment on the Republican row. Some of them hinted, however, that a Democratic attack on Gen. Douglas MacArthur will follow any Republican party effort to make Acheson the "scapegoat" for Korean reverses.

Dewey Talk to Outline Steps to Meet Crisis

ALBANY, N. Y., Dec. 12 (AP).—Governor Thomas E. Dewey will propose in detail Thursday night a program "to strengthen and defend" the Nation in the face of the world crisis.

Dewey's secretary, James C. Hagerty, said the Governor would deliver a major speech in New York City on the international situation and would speak as titular leader of the Republican Party.

The twice-defeated candidate for the presidency, who has renounced further White House aspirations, will address the annual dinner of the New York County Lawyers' Association. The speech probably will be broadcast.

Cost of Tools Held Too High In VA Training

Chairman Olin E. Teague (D., Tex.) of a specail House committee digging into alleged abuses in the GI education program said last night a "thorough overhauling" of the system is needed.

The statement came after two days of testimony from trade school operators dealing with the practices of furnishing tools to trainees at Government expense.

He said arrangements and agreements between manufacturers, supply houses and school operators "resulted in some detriment to the Government in the form of higher costs for these tools than would have been necessary."

Some of the dealings between schools and suppliers, said Teague, "were perfectly legitimate business transactions" and others "were somewhat akin to collusive practices."

"The blame can be parceled among the schools, the jobbers, the manufacturers and the Veterans' Administration," he said.

He will take a subcommittee to Dallas today for public hearings scheduled later this week.

He said the group will be back here Monday to hear witnesses from the C. & E. Marshall Co., Chicago, manufacturer of tols and equipment used by watchmakers' schools.

And then, he told newsmen, the committee will call VA officials to take their turn on the witness stand.

Farm Speakers Rise to Plea for Output

DALLAS, Dec. 12 (AP).—A White House call for more food production won quick response today from the American Farm Bureau.

W. Averell Harriman, President Truman's foreign affairs assistant, said in a telegram to the bureau's thirty-second annual convention:

"Our farmers must increase production of those foods and fibers that are in world short supply." Food, he said, made possible our victory in World War II—and "the situation is similar today."

Allan B. Kline, Iowa hog-farmer who heads the Nation's biggest farm organization, said the job can be done despite manpower shortages.

In his annual address in the Texas State Fair Auditorium, Kline told delegates from 45 States and Puerto Rico:

"We farmers know that we are on trial. There is in my mind no slightest doubt but that farmers of America are ready to do their share in our armed forces and do the hardest kind of work, using our every resource and skill to produce the things needed."

But Kline interjected a warning—that the Nation must not create a war-machine now which it cannot support for 10 or 15 years or even longer.

"We need to think things through," he said. "One of the greatest mistakes we could make would be to assume this will be over in three or four years and spend and build accordingly.

Harriman was to have been a principal speaker but, unable to come, he sent a 700-word telegram.

"In spite of everything that has happened, we must not accept the inevitability of another world war," Harriman said. "We must continue to strive with all our power to prevent such a disaster. Time is short—desperately short." He said the Kremlin seeks to create disunity among the free peoples of the world. Because confidence in the United States "is the welding force" for such unity, Harriman declared, "it is a matter of the greatest urgency that we strengthen our military forces and help other free nations to build their defenses."

To sustain such a military effort "we must work on a world-wide basis for an expanding economy at home and abroad," Harriman declared. "We must produce more—more of everything that is needed."

A college dean suggested to the federation that it take the lead in a government-economy drive by relinquishing some of the money Uncle Sam pays to farmers.

W. I. Myers, dean of the College of Agriculture of Cornell University and a principal speaker suggested, "Deferable non-defense expenditures of Government should be reduced sharply as an example of the self-discipline expected of citizens.

"The American Farm Bureau Federation might well take the lead in recommending reductions in Government payments to farmers as part of a broad program of reducing nonessential expenditures in all departments of Government."

Myers, echoing views of several speakers in pre-convention conferences yesterday, also expressed hope price controls can be avoided.

Inquiry Urged In Red Action At Chicago U.

By the United Press

Representative Harold H. Velde (R., Ill.) announced yesterday he will press for a full-scale Congressional investigation next month of communism in the Midwest.

He said the inquiry should concentrate on Communist activities in Illinois, particularly Chicago, which he described as the center of communism in the Midwest.

Velde, former FBI agent and a member of the House un-American Activities Committee, said he was spurred by recent Red propaganda distributed at Midwestern colleges urging college men to resist the draft.

He described the University of Chicago as a "hotbed of Communism" and said Communist material is being distributed at the University of Illinois, Bradley University and Northwestern University.

"The recent outpouring of Communist literature denouncing the United States position in Korea and the deliberate attempt to subvert impressionable students at Midwest colleges and universities," he said, "could have a drastic effect on the war effort.

Yugoslavia Aid Stirs House as Vote Nears

By the United Press

President Truman's $38,000,000 bill for aid to Yugoslavia stirred an unusual full-bodied foreign relations debate in the House yesterday, and several Republicans sided with Democrats in supporting the measure.

Acting Chairman James P. Richards (D., S. C.), of the Foreign Affairs Committee touched off the discussion of the Senate-approved relief plan for Marshal Tito's drougth-stricken country. He said the money would "prevent fall of the Yugoslav government."

"We can ill afford to miss this chance to drive a strong peg in the battle lines against international Communism," he said.

He was supported by Rep. James W. Wadsworth (R., N. Y.), who said that "if Tito falls, Stalin walks in."

He conceded there is no assurance Tito's 32 divisions would fight on the side of the Western democracies in event of a showdown. But Tito could not return to the Russian fold, he said, because "his head would roll if he did."

Rep. Mike Mansfield (D., Mont.), agreed that Tito would have to turn to the West in event of war.

The House will vote on the measure today.

Most opposition centered on the fact that Tito is a Communist and that the grant might set a precedent in giving U. S. aid with no strings atached.

Rep. John M. Vorys (R., Ohio), GOP leader on the House Foreign Affairs Committee, said Tito would not promise any military aid to the West. Calling it a "famine relief measure" was not accurate, he continued, because most Yugoslavs are "better off than more than half of the rest of the people in the world" insofar as food goes.

Rep. Laurie Battle (D., Ala.) said the Marshal personally promised him last summer that he "unequivocally would fight under the auspices of the United Nations."

"That's a gross fraud," retorted Rep. Lawrence H. Smith (R., Wis.). "This plan is the worst give-away program yet."

Test Ordered As Ilse Ends Her Tantrum

ILSE KOCH
Associated Press WIREPHOTO
. . . Calls off 4-day tantrum

AUGSBURG, Germany, Dec. 12 (AP).—A German court trying Ilse Koch for concentration camp atrocities today ordered that she undergo a sanity examination.

Mrs. Koch seemingly was seized by hysteria Sunday night. She tore up furniture in her cell and screamed "I am guilty, I am a sinner." At least one doctor testified she was shamming.

Supported by policemen, she was brought into court today for a continuation of her trial on charges of brutality toward German and Austrian inmates of Buchenwald, inciting the murder of 46 and the attempted murder of others.

Much of the time, the plump, red-haired woman, widow of a Buchenwald commander, munched bonbons and gazed dreamily out a window.

At one point, she suddenly slumped in her chair. Judge Georg Maginot ordered her removed from the court, but when she got to the door, between two policemen, she said: "I was only dreaming."

She walked back to her chair unassisted.

Judge Maginot directed that Mrs. Koch be taken to the Aichach women's prison, where medical facilities will permit a thorough examination to determine if her mind has failed. Aichach is a few minutes by car from Augsburg.

Cordell Hull Is Visitor At State Department

Former Secretary of State Cordell Hull paid a surprise visit on Secretary of State Dean Acheson yesterday and the two men spent 15 minutes discussing the troubled state of world affairs.

It was Hull's third visit to Acheson in the past two years. It was understood they discussed world problems only in general terms.

Acheson frequently has called on Hull at the hotel apartment where he has been living since his retirement.

Foresight Saved Eighth Army In Retreat From North Korea

By Don Whitehead

TOKYO, Dec. 12 (AP).—Lieut. Gen. Walton H. Walker saved his U. S. Eighth Army by a skillful retreat which was planned in detail even before the Chinese Reds began their big offensive 16 days ago.

This Eighth Army still is a potent fighting force. Although greatly outnumbered by Chinese and North Korean Red troops, its losses have been remarkably small.

"The enemy's pickings were damn slim in this withdrawl," one staff officer said. 'They got little they can use."

When the United Nations' "end the war" offensive was planned, Eighth Army strategists anticipated the possibility of a retreat. They were apprehensive because they did not know the strength of of the Chinese force that was being attacked.

Under Full Control

'There never was a time when this withdrawal was not under full control," a headquarters officer said.

The Chinese Reds attacked the Eighth Army on the night of November 25. They hurled overwhelming numbers of men at the U. N. forces. They hit hardest on the right flank held by the Second South Korean Corps.

Military men estimated the South Koreans were hit by two Chinese armies, at least six divisions battering at two divisions. The ROK (Republic of Korea) Second Corps had their Seventh and Eighth Divisions in the line and the Ninth Division in reserve.

The Reds struck toward Tokchon in the ROK Corps sector, while also battering at the United States Second and Twenty-fifth Divisions and the First ROK Division on the left side of the line.

Flanks Protected

On November 27, an Eighth Army staff officer said, it was apparent the army had to withdraw in the face of heavy odds. On that day an order went out from Eighth Army headquarters for the divisions to pull back to a small bridgehead north of the Chongchon River—roughly the starting point of the Allied offensive.

This decision was made to coordinate the pull-back and also to regroup the forces for renewed attack in case the Chinese were making only a limited counterattack.

But by November 28 it was apparent the Chinese were making an all-out drive with powerful forces. So, on November 29 the Eighth Army began its withdrawal under orders from General Walker.

The Second Infantry Division and the Turkish Brigade were moved across the roads leading from Tokchon to guard the flank of the retreating forces. These two groups kept the escape corridor open.

The Second Division took heavy casualties and the Turks lost about one-fifth of their fighting force. Their gallant stand saved the rest of the Eighth Army from being outflanked.

The hard-hit Second ROK Corps pulled out the Ninth Division intact and about half of the other two divisions. They saved much of their transport but lost about two-thirds of one battalion of artillery.

Units Help Each Other

The First Cavalry Division helped the Second Division and the Turks to block the roads leading into the right flank. The army quickly moved back to the Sukchon-Sunchon line south of the Chongchon River.

The 24th Division, the First ROK Division and the 25th Division came out of the bridgehead in good order. None of the divisions lost their service units, except in occasional guerrilla attacks behind the lines.

The crossing of the Chongchon was the critical period of the withdrawal. Here the enemy had a chance to cut the Eighth Army to pieces. But the flank defenses held and the river crossing was made in good order.

At the Sukchon-Sunchon line, the retreat plans went into effect. And since then the withdrawal has been made according to the Eighth Army's advance planning.

No one has tried to hide the fact that the Eighth Army suffered losses in men and equipment in the retreat. The greatest losses, perhaps, were in the trucks and jeeps and the communications equipment of the combat units.

In many cases, artillerymen fired their last rounds of ammunition, spiked their guns, and then left them.

In Pyongyang, the North Korean capital, the Army was forced to destroy and abandon supply dumps.

'Suggestions' Given Newsmen To Tighten Security in Korea

By Russell Brines

TOKYO, Dec. 12 (AP).—War correspondents today were given a new list of "suggestions" on how to protect military security.

Col. M. P. Echols, General MacArthur's press officer, explained this was necessary because the "new war" against Chinese Reds in Korea made secrecy more important.

He said there would be no formal censorship, however.

"While press censorship," he said, "was relatively unimportant in the North Korean phase (of the campaign) it becomes more important when the potentialities of the enemy are enormous, particularly when they are in a position to throw in resources the North Koreans never had—to wit, certain naval and air activities."

He listed these suggestions which he said would protect Allied security if closely observed:

1. "No information concerning planned activities should be given out, or moves in progress."
2. "No enemy movements with respect to our boundaries, weakness in our positions or undefended portions of our lines."
3. "No information concerning the effectiveness of specific items in enemy or United Nations materiel."
4. "No report of activities or locations of friendly troops except in terms of divisional units or separate United Nations forces and then only when the unit is in firm contact with the enemy.

Malayan Riots Eased Under Curfew Order

SINGAPORE, Dec. 12 (AP).—Moslem rioting over the Bertha Hertogh custody case eased tonight under a dusk-to-dawn curfew after casualties of the two-day outbreak mounted to 14 dead and 188 injured.

Bertha is a 13-year-old Dutch girl, reared and married as a Moslem, who was returned by court order December 2 to the custody of her Roman Catholic mother, Mrs. Adeline P. Hertogh, 55. The rioters, raging against Europeans, tried vainly to kidnap her.

The British colony's Supreme Court denied today a Malay appeal to prevent the girl's transfer to the Netherlands. It ruled Mrs. Hertogh may take Bertha home with her, but must return her to Singapore for another appeal hearing next March. Troops and police blocked an attempt by demonstrators to storm the court building.

(Malaya is a prime source of tin and rubber, vital defense materials. British Colonial Secretary James Griffiths told the House of Commons in London the Malayan federation government was considering "insurance arrangements" to safeguard the flow of those commodities through Singapore. He said there was no evidence that Communists inspired the rioting.)

Reports developed that Mrs. Hertogh and her daughter have been spirited out of Singapore. One version was that they sailed aboard a Dutch warship. Colonial Secretary W. L. Blythe declined to deny that Bertha has indeed left the colony. The Dutch consul-general, Jacob van der Gaag, said responsibility for comment lies solely with the colonial government.

Among the injured were two Associated Press correspondents, bureau chief Tom Masterson and Larry Allen. A mob attacked and burned their car last night. Kindly natives saved them from possible death.

Both suffered head and body injuries. Masterson has a hip fracture; Allen a wrist fracture. Both are in the civilian general hospital. Neither is in a serious condition.

Indian Saved N. Y. Man From 'Certain Death'

SINGAPORE, Dec. 12 (U.P.).—D. L. Goldsmith, of New York, said today he escaped "certain death" in Singapore's race riots when he was rescued from frenzied rioters by an unidentified Indian.

Goldsmith said he and a friend were trapped in a car in the rioting danger area. He said he identified himself as an American but nobody listened and one Malay hit him with a stick cutting a gash on his cheek.

At this moment, he said, an Indian came to his recuse, prevented the crowd from beating him and escorted Goldsmith and his friend to a cab.

Eisenhower's Choice By Europe Is Near

from London, where the military chiefs of the North Atlantic countries announced "definite agreement" on the composition of the new force, the powers of the commander, and the methods of using German units in the combined army.

The military chiefs, with Admiral Forrest P. Sherman represeting the United States, will meet in London today with the Foreign Ministers' deputies of the 12 Nations, and their agreement, in turn, will be put before the Brussels meeting of the highest-level officials Monday.

(Anti-aircraft commanding generals from seven European Nations, plus American representatives, also met in London yesterday, the United Press reported. Their session was secret, but it is well known that one of Europe's chief concerns is its miserably weak defense against atomic attack.)

Apart from the expected agreement on the Supreme Comander, the most important decision of the Brussels meeting will be to go ahead with the combined army without waiting for German assent to the use of German units.

Appointment Held Up

Last October, when the defense ministers met in Washington, the United States refused to go ahead with appointment of Eisenhower until France had agreed on the principle of using German manpower. Now the French have agreed to embody German units of about 6000 men each, about the size of regimental combat teams, in the combined force.

It will be left to the French, and to the three Allied High commissioners in Germany, to win German assent to a plan which, up to now, all German parties have denounced as inequality.

The American High Commissioner, John J. MCCloy, will be in Brussels with his British and French colleagues, and the Big Three foreign ministers may have an informal meeting with them to discuss how to win German adherence to the plan.

Once Eisenhower reaches Europe as Supreme Commander, he, too, is expected to work on the Germans, with his well-known talent for persuading men of many nationalities to work together.

Military leaders of the West have not overlooked the Soviet note of October 18, which announced that the Soviet Union would not "tolerate" the revival of a German professional army. For this reason and for others, the Western powers will not now make military concessions to the Germans beyond the compromise plan which the French are ready to accept.

But the Western powers agreed at their New York meeting in September to offer the Germans virtual equality in other fields. They decided to make western Germany a sovereign nation, with its own Ambassadors abroad and full control of its own affairs.

These proposals, to be embodied in a revised occupation statute, are now being studied by a three-power group in London. The new statute probably will be submitted to the Germans before a formal request is made to them to contribute troops to the combined Western army.

Air Force to Have 84 Groups

air defense roles and have been switched to tactical missions. Four are working with the four mobilized Army National Guard divisions and the fifth is designated as a tactical reconnaissance group. The Air Reserve groups in active service include three troop carrier units and one light bomber unit.

In addition, four temporary tactical air groups were organized in Japan for the duration of the Korean war. These provisional groups are expected to be made permanent, though they may be given another role. Eight additional groups are to be added this year, either by creating new ones or calling in more Guard and Reserve units.

Officials said the 68 group Air Force expected to be in being by next summer will be composed somewhat as follows: Strategic air power, 25 groups; air defense, 15 groups; tactical aviation, 28 groups.

These are approximations, due to security considerations, but show the emphasis on each type of air power, it was said.

Similarly, the further expansion to 84 groups during the following year will be somewhat as follows: strategic, 35 groups; air defense, 23 groups; tactical, 26 groups. This is under the program to be started under the 18-billion-dollar supplemental defense program now before Congress. If the strength of the armed forces is to be greatly increased as a result of recent developments—as appears absolutely certain now—the Air Force probably will be increased to over 100 groups. But plans for this still are in the discussion stage.

The long-range B-36 bomber still figures prominently in the USAF's strategic mission, but most of the new groups to be organized are expected to be equipped with the shorter range jet B-47s which would operate from advance bases against Eurasian targets.

U. S. and Britain Back Move for Cease-Fire in Korea

tezam of Iran would appoint two other persons to help him and then would determine the basis on which a satisfactory cease-fire in Korea can be arranged. He would report his recommendations to the General Assembly.

The resolution was one of two proposals put before the committee today by Rau on behalf of the 13 Asian and Middle Eastern countries. The resolution now being considered was put ahead of all other business by a committee vote of 48 to 5 (Soviet bloc). Four countries, Ecuador, Turkey, Thailand and Nationalist China, abstained.

The second resolution, sponsored only by 12 countries, recommends that the Assembly set up a committee to meet as soon as possible and make recommendations for the peaceful settlement of existing issues in the Far East. The Philippines went along on the first proposal, but stood aside on the second.

This involves a political settlement in the Far East and Warren E. Austin, United States delegate, and others made it clear they would have to see a full cease-fire before they would even consider that proposal. In discussing his plan, Rau suggested that Communist China, the United States, Britain, France, the Soviet Union, Egypt and India make up the committee.

Backed as 'First Step'

Austin said a cease-fire and "protection of armed forces and of the Korean population is the first step" toward any settlement.

"It should be executed, finished, before trying other steps, such as political issues," he said. "From the discussion here we arrive at the opinion, and we think we have a right to assume that other steps will not be taken until the bases of and the fact of cease-fire have been established.

Kenneth Younger of Britain said the cease-fire idea was a step toward a peaceful settlement. He said the U.N. naturally could not go back on the principles for which it was fighting, but it certainly should try to settle the question peacefully if possible.

The United Nations Security Council last, June 25 ordered a cease-fire when the Communist North Koreans invaded South Korea. That demand was ignored by the North Koreans and the Assembly delegates apparently are taking a lesson from that.

Instead of demanding a cease-fire now, with the Communist Chinese soldiers pushing into Korea and the United Nations troops in retreat, the Assembly is expected to see if a cease-fire can be arranged.

Atomic Question Debated

The General Assembly this afternoon took up debate on the atomic question. One resolution was put up by Australia, Canada, Ecuador, France, the Netherlands, Turkey, Britain and the United States. It would aim at combining the work of the United Nations Atomic Energy Commission and the United Nations Commission for Conventional Armaments.

A second resolution, by the Soviet Union, would instruct the Atomic Energy Commission to resume work immediately and work out a convention for unconditional prohibition of atomic weapons and for international control of atomic energy.

Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Y. Vishinsky accused President Truman of threatening the world with the atomic bomb until all control of atomic energy is put in the hands of American "monopolists."

The Soviet Foreign Minister referred briefly to Mr. Truman's statement that the use of the atom bomb in Korea was always under consideration.

U. S. Delegate John Sherman Cooper ridiculed Vishinsky's charges, asserted his alternatives were "specious," and invited the Soviet Union to end its boycott of the U. N.'s Atomic Commission.

The General Assembly today also created a seven-nation committee to study the China representation question and report back before the end of this session.

The question will be: Shall Nationalist China continue to sit in the U. N. or shall the Chinese seat be given to the Communist regime?

NATIONAL
POWER

National Air Power is the balanced combination of:

Design and productive capacity: The engineers and factories

Training capacity: The flight schools

Striking force: The Air Force and the Navy

Air transport capacity: The Military Air Transport Service and the Airlines

At the beginning of World War II the airlines owned a total of eighth four-engine land planes capable of crossing the ocean.

Today, the airlines own and operate 485 modern, four-engine land planes, with 94 more on order for early future delivery

The airlines of the United States are the backbone of military airlift reserve. They participated in the Hump Operation, between India and China; in the Berlin Airlift, and in the Korean Airlift. Their capacity, ability and experience is at all times available for the difficult tasks of difficult times.

The confidence of the American people in civil air transportation, and the encouragement and support of air transportation by Congress has developed in the United States a civil air fleet of unequalled strength. Continued support will assure America of an air fleet always available for tasks, near or far, which may arise.

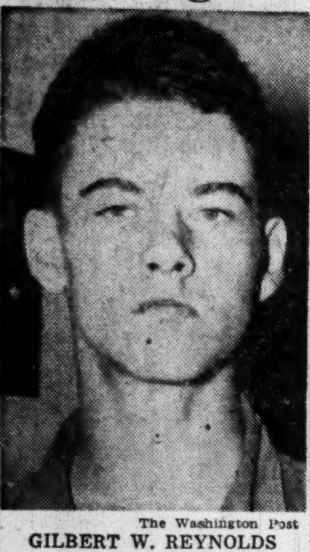
GI Held in Bolling Slaying Ruled Insane



The Washington Post
GILBERT W. REYNOLDS
. . . declared insane

Pvt. Gilbert W. Reynolds, 18, who was indicted for first-degree murder in the robbery-killing of a taxi driver at Bolling Air Base, was declared insane yesterday.

The soldier, stationed at Bolling was ordered committed to St. Elizabeths Hospital. He will face trial if he is subsequently judged sane.

Reynolds has been held in custody since June, when he was arrested for the slaying of Gordon C. Brown, 24, of Seat Pleasant, Md., in a holdup attempt at the air base. Reynolds was apprehended after almost 4000 base personnel were questioned in connection with the shooting.

The lunacy hearing in District Court was held on motion of Attorney John Fitzpatrick, who was appointed to defend Reynolds.

Four psychiatrists agreed unanimously that Reynolds is now insane. They are Drs. Joseph L. Gilbert and Amino Perretti, both of Gallinger Hospital, and Drs. William G. Cushard and Avrohm Jacobson of St. Elizabeths Hospital.

Miss Truman Wins Plaudits of 1500 In Chattanooga

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Dec. 12 (AP).—Margaret Truman's singing brought applause for two encores last night from an appreciative audience of 1500.

But a newspaper critic termed her voice "not suited to operatic arias or orchestral accompaniment."

Miss Truman was guest soloist with the Chattanooga Symphony Orchestra.

Critic Ruth Golden of the Chattanooga Times commented:

"Miss Truman is a gracious artist . . . and she was at all times winning and charming. Unfortunately Miss Truman's voice is not suited to operatic arias or orchestral accompaniment."

However, Mrs. Golden Added: "It is to be hoped that she will be a patient student until her voice develops more maturity."

Turks Vote Confidence

ISTANBUL, Dec. 12 (U.P.).—Parliament gave Premier Adnan Menderes a 311-to-39 vote of confidence today, after a 10-hour rebate, on his sending of Turkish troops to Korea where they have been in some of the grimmest fighting.

Jersey Commissioner Finally Leaves Office

JERSEY CITY, N. J., Dec. 12 (U.P.).—City Commissioner James F. Murray won the "battle of the locks" today and went home, after having barricaded himself in his office four days ago.

Murray said his "sit-in," began when he caught locksmiths changing the locks on his office doors, ended" in a complete victory." The locks were ordered changed by Murray's rivals on the five-man city commission, who last week stripped him and Commissioner Charles Witkoski of all power by outvoting them.

"They gave me what I've been asking for since Saturday," Murray said jubilantly. "A man I picked out is puting on the door locks I ordered. And a man (rival Commissioner Donald) Spence picked is putting his locks on. I can't open theirs. And they can't open mine."

or "Spic," followed by figures.

Senator Tobey (R., N. H.) said the figures in the "in" column totaled $206,283, those in the "out" column $188,425.

One of the symbols on the list was "Frank C," listed for $20,423 at one place in the "in" column and $9570 at another. Tobey wanted to know if that could be a reference to another reputed underworld kingpin, Frank Costello. Adonis wasn't talking.

Adonis, whose real name is Joseph Doto, was brought before the committee under subpena after months of effort. Kefauver told him when the committee recessed until today that he would remain subject to the subpena.

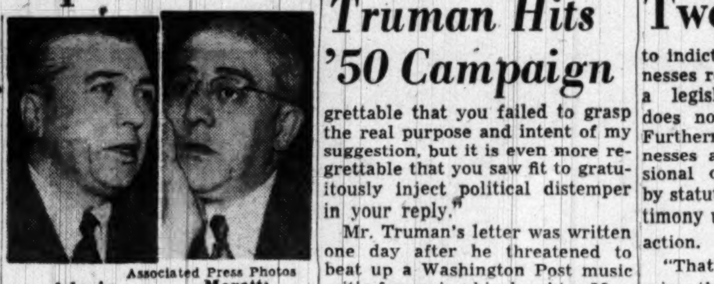
A contempt citation requires approval of the full committee, then of the Senate itself. Such action sends the case to the Federal district attorney for presentation to a grand jury. The maximum penalty upon conviction is $1000 and a year in jail for each count.

Adonis, cigarette in hand most of the time he was on the stand, admitted that he once had read a description of himself as the "rackets boss of Brooklyn." He refused to say, however, whether he thought the description fit.

Another question was whether "Lucky" Luciano, since deported New York vice overlord, he called a meeting of big-time gamblers in 1935 in an effort to carve up territories and avert warfare between gamblers.

Adonis said all he knew was that he didn't attend any such meeting.

Salvatore Moretti, the earlier witness, gave the committee little more evidence than Adonis. He said he couldn't recall anything definite without his records, and he had lost those.



Associated Press Photos

Adonis Moretti

. . . May be cited for contempt

About the most definite information the committee got from Moretti was that his income last year may have totaled as much as $84,000 but he had no business. Moretti, like Adonis, is under gambling charges in both New York and New Jersey.

He said he knows Adonis, but he would not say whether he has ever been in business with him.

Truman Hits '50 Campaign

grettable that you failed to grasp the real purpose and intent of my suggestion, but it is even more regrettable that you saw fit to gratuitously inject political distemper in your reply."

Mr. Truman's letter was written one day after he threatened to beat up a Washington Post music critic for saying his daughter Margaret's voice was flat.

In other letters the President has:

Said he wouldn't appoint John L. Lewis dogcatcher.

Described the Marines as a Navy police force with a propaganda almost like Stalin's—a crack for which he later apologized.

Hebert, in his proposal for a day of prayer, had said the Nation was engaged in a crusade against a "godless ideology." He said it was a crusade "to gain the Holy Grail of individual liberty and freedom . . ."

The correspondence was released by Hebert's office. Hebert is out of town.

The Hebert letter did not contain any criticism of the Administration. However, he has consistently been aligned in Congress with the States Rights Democrats and has oppposed many Administration measures. He is reported to have been critical of the national Administration in his recent campaign for reelection.

One of his chief supporters in Louisiana is Leander Perez, a leader in the States Rights movement.

Two years ago Hebert was taken off the House Committee on un-American Activities through an Administration maneuver which put through a rule that all members of the committee must be lawyers. Hebert is a former New Orleans newspaper editor.

Senator Long (D., La.) who was reelected last month 220,907 to 30,931 for his Republican opponent, said he doesn't know what the President was talking about.

"I thought the campaign in which I was involved was on a high plane," he commented.

Democratic committee officials who asked not to be quoted by name said they recalled some "dirty campaign literature" was used in Louisiana in the summer primary.

In the other States complained about by the President, the Administration lost three leading supporters—Senators Scott Lucas of Illinois, the majority floor leader; Elbert D. Thomas of Utah, chairman of the Senate Labor Committee, and Frank P. Graham of North Carolina.

Senators Lucas and Thomas declined public comment on the President's letter, although Thomas told a reporter he expects the Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee headed by Senator Gillette (D., Iowa) to investigate the campaign in his State.

Senator Capehart (R., Ind.), who defeated Democrat Alexander M. Campbell last month, said he wasn't surprised by Mr. Truman's remarks.

"I don't blame the President for being ashamed of the campaign he and his New Deal candidate in Indiana carried on," Capehart commented. "The President was correct in saying it was the lowest in the history of Indiana."

Gillette told a reporter his campaign committee had received no complaints from Illinois, Indiana and Louisiana. He said the committee had sent investigators into Utah and North Carolina, but that the group's findings in these cases will not be made public until the committee formally reports to indict, whereas yesterday's witnesses refused to speak up before a legislative committee, which does not have indicting powers. Furthermore, Walter said, witnesses appearing before Congressional committees are protected by statute against having their testimony used against them in court action.

"That decision did not determine that an arm of Congress is powerless to proceed in matters on which it must legislate," Representative Walter commented.

[The Senate Crime Investigating Committee yesterday also was confronted with a witness—big time gambler Joe Adonis—who refused to answer questions on grounds of self-incrimination. No communist issue was involved but the Supreme Court ruling appeared to present new difficulties for this committee as well.

[Meanwhile in New York the Communist Party announced that on the basis of the decision it will challenge constitutionality of the new Internal Security Act, fathered by Senator McCarran (D., Nev.). That act requires registration of Communists.]

The Washington Post

ROY H. WOOD

. . . a reluctant witness

Wood, well-built and nattily dressed, refused to reply to any questions involving his possible connection with the Communist Party. Through a vague and hazy recollection of his past, Wood said he had worked for WPA, had served in the Civilian Conservation Corps, and was employed for three years in Baltimore by the Federal Security Administration as file clerk. He refused to say why he was separated from that job.

The witness kept insisting he be permitted to read a prepared statement, and several times clashed with Representative Walter. "I do not believe the atom bomb is a good thing for humanity, and we need an international agreement to outlaw the bomb," cried Wood.

"I agree," responded Representative Walter. "A great opportunity has been given for the Commies to do just that."

Wood's statement, placed in the record, attacked the committee's hearings as a "part of the drive toward war," and a "political lynching bee of respected Negro labor leaders in Washington."

Paul, who said he had attended Tuskeegee Institute and Denver University law school, admitted he had been a bookkeeper for 18 months with Local 74, but denied he was ousted because he insisted on distributing Communist literature to union members. Paul, like Wood, was accompanied to the stand by Attorney Joseph Forer, Paul also was permitted to enter a statement, this one also accusing the committee of trying to smash Local 74.

The names of Wood and Paul have been mentioned again and again in the three days of hearings before the committee: Wood, as the man who often directed policy for the Communist cell which had captured control of the 3000-men laborers' local, and Paul, as the employed bookkeeper who also acted as a monitor for the Communist Party chieftains.

It was an argument over Paul's status in the union which triggered a bitter feud within Local 74 between Henry Thomas, president, and Thomas G. Sampler, secretary-treasurer, both admitted former Communists.

Thomas had testified earlier that the argument over Paul was settled by Philip Frankfeld, identified as chairman of the D. C.-Maryland Communist Party, as sort of an informal mediator, eve nthough both Thomas and Sampler had officially quit the Communist Party. Yesterday, Sampler took the stand and charged Thomas had been a party to bringing in Frankfeld to block the firing of Paul.

This incident appeared to be the major difference in the Thomas-Sampler versions of Local 74's capture and dominance by a Communist cell of half a dozen members. Thomas has confessed to following the party line "instinctively" even after he quit the party, but that he did so on his own, and not on orders from Communist Party leaders.

Sampler, now fighting with Thomas for leadership of Local 74, told the committee yesterday he was recruited into the Communist Party by Thomas in May of 1947. He said he followed Thomas' orders right up to the time he and Thomas quit the party in April of 1949, in order to sign the Taft-Hartley non-Communist oath required of union officers. It is Sampler's contention that Thomas violated this oath by Co. to party discipline.

Before leaving the party, Sampler said he had qualms over the Communist Party's real intention. On the low levels, he said, the Communist Party urged the Negroes to fight against segregation. But when he was sent to a Communist study class, he was taught that a Negro "nation within a nation" would be established from the Eastern Shore to Texas when the Communists got control of the U. S. A.

Sampler asserted he had been fighting hard to oust the Communists from control of Local 74 since he broke with the party. It was his private testimony before House committee aides which initiated the current investigation.

Several other members of Local 74, testified yesterday they had been Communists, and as such had helped the Communist Party dominate the union, but have broken completely with the Reds. They were William Gray, 1208 Quincey st. nw.; Norris Hammond, 849 Howard rd. se.; Ernest Chambers, 406 N st. nw.; McKinley Gray, 53½ Hanover pl. nw.

The hearings will be continued at 10 a. m. today in the House un-American Activities committee room, Old House Office Building.

Film Writers Favor Strike In Hollywood

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 12 (AP).—Members of the Screen Writers Guild voted overwhelmingly last night to authorize a strike against the major movie studios. The Guild announced the vote was 493 to 3.

Following the strike vote, the Guild pledged a $100,000 strike-fund for use by the scenario writers if a walkout becomes necessary. The union has 60 days to notify the producers that the present contract is being terminated.

Negotiations for a new contract with the producing companies have stalled over four points:

1. The Guild wants $250 weekly on an 8-week guarantee of employment. Producers offer $200 for 10 weeks. Present scale is $187.50 on a 2-week guarantee.
2. The Guild wants payment to writers for possible future use of films on TV. Both parties agreed to postpone this point, but the Guild wants the right to reopen the issue at any future time. Producers want to let it go for the life of the contract.
3. Writers want to be paid for original stories if they are used for sequels, remakes, television or radio. Producers refuse.
4. Writers want equal billing with producers and directors in studio publicity and advertising. Producers refuse.

Do you have to be rich to own stocks?

When a corporation has nearly a million stockholders, they can't all be rich. Rich folks don't get together in a crowd that big. For example, in a corporation listed on the New York Stock Exchange, the facts are:

. . . over a quarter million people own just one to five shares, $150 to $750 worth, at recent market prices.

. . . not a single one of the million owns as much as one-half of one per cent of the company's stock.

Or look at the 400,000 stockholders in a company making automobiles. A third of them own less than $1000 worth of stock. And two out of three stockholders of a big food company own less than 50 shares.

It's millions of average-income people who own shares in America's corporations. Owning stock means owning "a piece of a business"—risking one's money in order to share in the profits.

Despite this wide ownership, some people still ask, "Will my investment be welcome if my spare money will buy only a few shares?" The answer is simple, positive. Handling investors' orders for a few shares or hundreds is the day-to-day business of member firms of the New York Stock Exchange.

Helpful information is yours for the asking at any of their offices, which are located in 378 cities. They invite the opportunity to put their facts and experience to work for you.

New Preferred Issue Filed by Finance Firm

By S. Oliver Goodman

Lincoln Service Corp., Washington, plans to issue 80,000 shares of new $1.50 cumulative dividend preferred stock, with warrants.

A registration statement was filed yesterday with the Securities and Exchange Commission, giving details of a proposed refinancing.

Under the plan, 46,950 of the new preferred shares will be offered in exchange for outstanding 7 percent prior preferred stock and 6 percent participating preferred stock.

Balance of 33,050 new preberred shares will be offered to the public as soon as the SEC registration is effective. This is expected early in January. Johnston, Lemon & Co., Washington investment firm, will head a syndicate which will underwrite the issue.

Present holders of the 7 percent prior preferred will be permitted to exchange their holdings on the basis of two new shares plus $2.50 in cash for each old share. The 6 percent participating preferred will be entitled to an exchange on a share-for-share basis, plus $2.50 in cash. If the exchange offer is not accepted, the company will redeem the 7 percent preferred at $52.50 a share and the 6 percent preferred at $27.50 a share.

Proceeds of about $750,000 on the public offering, the statement said, will be used for additional working capital by the small-loan firm.

Warrants on the new shares will entitle holders to purchase two common shares at $12 each for each five shares of preferred held, for a period of five years.

Lincoln Service Corp., with headquarters in the Woodward Building, has shown rapid expansion since its creation in 1931. It now has in operation 47 offices in six States and the District of Columbia. President is Charles Delmar, founder and head of the company since its inception.

NEW DIRECTOR: Alfred G. Neal yesterday was elected a director of the Riggs National Bank to fill the vacancy left by the death of Dr. William McClellan. Neal is president and board chairman of the Potomac Electric Power Co. Active in local business and civic affairs, Neal is also a board member of the Washington Board of Trade, Acacia Mutual Life Insurance Co. and the D. C. Chapter, American Red Cross. He is a trustee of the Boys Club of Washington, vice president of Group Hospitalization, Inc., and a governor of Episcopal Eye, Ear and Throat Hospital.

MELON: Directors of Hamilton National Bank yesterday declared a special yearend dividend of 50 cents a share, payable December 21 to stock of record December 15. This brings the total to be paid in 1950 to $2.50 a share, compared with $2 in 1949. Also, the board authorized the transfer of $250,000 from undivided profits to surplus, raising the latter account to $2,750,000, with capital at $1,750,000.

C. & P. REPORT: Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. reported October net income of $517,692, an increase of $71,175 over the previous month. This brought net for the first 10 months to $4,375,387 as compared with $2,812,104 in the same 1949 period. There were 482,717 telephones in service here on October 31, a gain of 21,136 over the same 1949 date. Total plant in service at the end of October was valued at $116,455,413, representing an increase of seven million dollars for the past 12 months.

FETE: Directors of the Home Building Association and their wives attended a dinner last night at the Columbia Country Club in commemoration of the founding of the institution 67 years ago. President Samuel M. Thrift reviewed the history of the association and pointed out that assets now total $2,100,000. Record books dating to the turn of the century are on display at Home Building's offices at 2006 Pennsylvania ave. nw.

APPOINTMENT: Franklin B. Reybold, local industrial and sales engineer, has been appointed Washington representative for Willys-Overland military sales division. A graduate of West Point, Reybold served with the Army Air Forces in Washington and the China-Burma-India theater. He is the son of Lieut. Gen. Eugene Reybold who was Chief of Engineers in World War II.

WHO'S NEWS: Gilbert W. Paul, formerly with Capital Airlines, has been appointed by National Airlines as its district sales manager in Washington. He succeeds Parke Wright 3d, recently shifted to a similar post in New York City . . . Miss Marion Hammett, formerly a Hollywood publicist and public relations specialist, has joined the Lewis Agency, Washington advertising firm . . . C. Bailey Scrimgeour, Washington, has been elected assistant vice president of National Forge & Ordnance Co. of Irvine, Pa. . . . Lewis S. Rosenstiel, board chairman of Schenley Industries, Inc., has been elected to the board of Columbia Pictures Corp.

DuMont to Protect Service Contracts

CHICAGO, Dec. 12 (AP).—Du Mont said today it has taken steps to protect owners of Du Mont television sets from financial failure of service organizations with which set owners have service contracts.

The announcement was made by Allen B. Du Mont Laboratories, Inc., makers of Du Mont receiving sets.

Hereafter, it said, authorized service organizations and authorized servicing dealers will be required to maintain escor accounts in banks to cover every contract customer. Failure to do so will result in loss of Du Mont authorization.

Stocks Churn Unevenly, End Slightly Down

NEW YORK, Dec. 12 (AP).—Conflicting price currents swirled through the stock market today.

Profit taking sales clipped many issues which advanced in yesterday's sparkling rise while a large assortment of other stocks displayed independent strength.

Final results showed a thorough mixture of gains and losses, most limited to less than $1 a share. According to the Associated Press average of 60 stocks, the market showed a small decline but this was due largely to pronounced weakness in Santa Fe Railway.

WHAT STOCKS DID:	Tues.	Mon.
Advances	500	646
Declines	428	293
Unchanged	262	231
Total issues	1190	1170

Sales volume piled up to an impressive 2,140,000 shares despite the absence of any clear-cut ideas on prices. This compared with 2,600,000 shares Monday.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks lost 30 cents at $85 a share. The rail group dragged down the rest of the market for industrials on average showed a slight gain and utilities only a negligible loss.

Santa Fe Railway dropped a hefty $3.75 to $146.25 after a gain of $8.75 Monday. The stock advanced an extreme of $11.25 yesterday, apparently in response to reports that uranium-bearing ores had been discovered on land controlled by the rail system.

Oils made a better than average showing. Sinclair, the most active stock, moved up 37 cents to $31.62, Standard Oil (N.J.) 75 cents at $86.25, Texas 50 cents at $77 and Gulf Oil $1.37 at $78.87.

Ending higher were International Telephone, Pan American Air, Armour, Servel, National Airlines, United Air Lines, Missouri Pacific preferred, Long Island Lighting, Chiles, and Western Union.

On the minus side were General Motors, U. S. Steel, Bethlehem Steel, Chrysler, U. S. Rubber, Admiral Corp., Dow Chemical, Eastman Kodak, American Tobacco, and Du Pont.

Western Union Votes $2 on Class A Stock

Western Union Telegraph Co. declared a dividend for 1950 of $2 a share on its Class A stock, payable December 29 to stockholders of record December 22.

Walter P. Marshall, president, said earnings for this year warranted the action but that it did not imply future dividend policy. Future dividends will be considered in the light of future earnings, he added. The dividend is the first paid by the company since April 1, 1948, when $1 a share was paid.

In the first 10 months of this year Western Union had net income of $6,526,281, compared with a loss of $4,743,992 in the corresponding period last year.

Chicago Grain

CHICAGO, Dec. 12 (AP).—Heavy profit cashing toward the close of today's Board of Trade session left grains mixed, after new highs were established in some deliveries of wheat, corn, oats and lard.

The market was nervous and although wheat continued yesterday's closing rally, most traders were content to take the day's profit, rather than establish a definite position until the outcome of proposed controls are known.

Wheat started firm, but eased off and at the close was ¼ higher to ¾ lower; corn was ⅜ to ½ lower; oats were ⅜ higher to ¼ lower; rye was 1 to 1¼ cents higher; soybeans were ¼ higher to 1¼ lower, and lard was 3 cents lower to 10 cents a hundredweight higher.

Business Outlook

Price Control Is Easy Way Out Of Rising Wage-Cost Spiral

By J. A. Livingston

WHEN North Korean troops first crossed the thirty-eighth parallel nearly six months ago, there was the same consternation, confusion and anxiety in the United States and the western world as today, following the Chinese Red offensive against General MacArthur's forces in Korea.

Livingston

Then, United States officials were surprised by the battle-worthiness of North Korean troops even as now they're impressed by the Chinese. Then a British member of Parliament talked of use of the A-bomb, even as several Congressmen and President Truman did recently. Then as now Secretary of State Acheson called the attack a cynical act of aggression.

The point is simply this: If we need a bigger defense program now, we needed it then. If we need to draft men into the armed forces rapidly, we needed to then. If we need high taxation now, we needed it then. The Chinese Reds didn't change the situation. They merely emphasized what we should have known: That Stalin's pretty good at fighting wars by proxy.

Yet, all of a sudden, Washington seems panicked. Having been too weak back in July, having delayed too long in showing economic leadership, the Administration seems headed whole-hog the other way.

AT THE TIME of Korea, Truman was urged to invoke price, wage and profits controls. But he rejected the idea. An army of enforcement agents to police prices had no appeal. He preferred to rely on higher taxes and credit curbs to check the rise in prices.

On September 9, in a fireside chat, he said: "There is only one sensible way to pay for our increased defenses. It is the plain, simple, direct way. We should pay for them as we go, out of taxes." Yet, when Congress voted only five billion dollars in new taxes at a time when new defense appropriations were heading toward 20 billion dollars, Truman was satisfied. That was what he and Secretary of the Treasury Snyder had asked for, in the belief that that was all Congress would vote on the eve of the Congressional elections.

W. Stuart Symington, chairman of the National Security Resources Board, summed up the Administration's philosophy at the time by saying that even though military appropriations are substantial and "will go higher, they are not high enough to justify at this stage the complete system of controls we had in 1944 when the military 'take' was practically half of the total output of the economy. . . . We must not put the whole economy in a strait jacket for an indefinite period."

AN ADMINISTRATION shift to all-out controls would imply that early estimates of the defense needs were far too low. We'd have to assume that Defense Secretary George Marshall is now talking in terms of a sixty-billion-dollar and higher military effort, which would imply a Federal budget equal to 30 percent to 40 percent of our national energies and resources. Such a load would not be manageable on a pay-as-we-go basis. In World War II, taxes ran at the peak to 20 percent of output. The usual estimate of pay-as-we-go for the United States is 25 percent.

If Secretary Marshall is not talking of that size program, then we could still get by without all-out controls, provided President Truman and the members of Congress really meant business on taxes. A pay-as-we-go, anti-inflation program would call for increases in tax rates—all along the line—taxes on corporations over and above the proposed excess profits tax, taxes on individuals, and boosts in excise rates. It would have to be the first order of business of the new Eighty-second Congress.

However, the pressures are all the other way, politically. High taxes hurt people, cost votes. Price control seems to help people. The worker feels the Congressman is "sticking up for him," is fighting his battles.

AND, AS FAR as the Congressman is concerned, price control gives him a perfect way out. The symptoms of inflation are kept under cover. Prices are fixed. So, there's no need to increase taxes as high as they ought to be increased in order to stop inflation.

Probably, Washington will respond to the immediate pressures. The cost of living has just shot up to another new high. Ditto wholesale prices. General Motors and Ford have rejected a request to rescind recent price advances. Chrysler Corp., copying General Motors, has granted its workers a five-year cost-of-living wage contract. Another example of built-in inflation, of wages chasing up prices and prices, wages.

Everybody wants his'n — the worker, higher wages; the manufacturer, higher profits; the farmer, higher prices. You can just imagine an official throwing up his hands in desperation and saying: "If people can't restrain themselves, I guess they won't tax themselves either. We might as well have price control!"

New York Cotton

New York, Dec. 12 (AP).—Cotton futures closed $1.65 a bale lower to 95 cents higher in nervous trading today. Fears that price controls may be placed on cotton brought hedging and liquidation into old crop months and stimulated renewed demand for new crop positions.

The prevailing belief in the trade is that if a ceiling is imposed on raw cotton it will be around 41 cents a pound which approximates the average price received by farmers on their cotton sales as of the middle of November. Nearby deliveries are selling above 41 cents a pound, while the new crop months are more than 4 cents a pound under that level.

Nobody's Defense

It must make the Politburo very happy to know not only that the Capital of the United States has no air raid warning system, but also that a committee of Congress has again put off a request to purchase one. Is the House Appropriations Subcommittee working on the theory that the people of Washington will be better off if they don't know what hits them? Unfortunately, the decision to delay the appropriation for civil defense has not even this weak reasoning behind it. A subcommittee member has explained: "One of the big reasons we voted against giving the District money now was to give the House greater bargaining power over the Senate." What is this but politics before security?

In putting the matter over till January the subcommittee does more than delay the appropriation a month. Congress must be organized and other matters will come up; the chances are that it will be June before an appropriation goes through. In other words, perhaps half a year is being lost. In addition, of course, specifications and bids require time even after the appropriation is in hand.

Not all the District request is sacrosanct, to be sure; such items as money to purchase uniforms for auxiliary policemen might be dispensed with at this time. But in any system of priorities air raid warning signals must rank near the top. Nor is the possibility that the Federal Government may later defray part of the cost of such devices a good excuse for not acting now. National civil defense legislation could easily include a provision for reimbursement to cities which have bought equipment in accordance with Federal specifications. The important thing is to get going. The complaint so far is that cities have leaned too heavily on the Federal Government, but here is an instance in which Washington wants to use its own money already in the treasury and a subcommittee of Congress will not let it.

A spur is likewise needed for the bill authorizing dispersal of new Government buildings. No appropriation for this plan has yet been requested, but there must be legislative authorization before the program can have any reality at all. The Public Works Committees, which have custody of this bill, might well remember that Congress itself might someday need a substitute meeting place.

Thanks to the sense of urgency in the Armed Services Subcommittee and the work of Senator Kefauver and Representatives Durham and Vinson, the bill to establish a national civil defense administration has made more progress. It is imperative to get a bill enacted and the money to carry it out in this session of Congress. Amendments, if they are found desirable, can be made later; the proposal presented by the National Security Resources Board at least furnishes a base for this most essential task. As respects the District warning system, our lingering hope is that the House subcommittee will reconsider its refusal while there is still time.

Productive Capacity

The Federal Reserve Board's index of industrial production reached a new postwar peak in October. However, the increase over September was slight, and advance reports indicate that November production has not risen above the October level. That may mean that industry's resources in manpower and equipment are now fully employed, precluding further increases in overall output. However, even if that should prove to be true, it is also true that a large part of the country's productive equipment was being used in October to maintain the output of passenger autos "at a very high rate," according to the Reserve Board. Subsequent declines in November auto production are attributed mainly to model changeovers. Part of the labor and productive facilities utilized for this kind of production will be released for defense production as the output of automobiles is cut down by credit and production controls. Other industries turning out durable consumer goods in record volume will also be unable to continue operating at present high level as controls tighten. They, too, will be forced to release manpower and equipment for defense production.

Of course, there will be some production bottlenecks that will cause trouble, notably in the case of steel, but again controls over materials in short supply will reduce the pressure of civilian demands on the inadequate productive capacity of the industry. In other words, even if the country is close to full utilization of its productive capacity, there is no reason to fear that it will be unable to produce enough to satisfy essential civilian demands as well as defense requirements.

Self-Incrimination

The Supreme Court's decision that Patricia Blau cannot be compelled to give testimony that might incriminate her merely reiterates well established constitutional doctrine. The fifth amendment provides in unmistakable terms that "No person . . . shall be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself." In this instance Mrs. Blau was summoned before a Federal grand jury in Denver and asked many questions about the Communist Party in Colorado. She refused to answer on grounds of self-incrimination, and the Supreme Court says she had a right to do so because she might have feared that her replies would subject her to prosecution under the Smith Act making it a crime to advocate overthrow of the Government by force or violence.

This newspaper had anticipated yesterday's decision. More than two years ago, in discussing the contempt citations of numerous persons who had refused to tell congressional committees whether they were Communists, we pointed out: ". . . there appears to be no way in which those who have refused to answer on grounds of self-incrimination can be compelled to talk unless they have been given blanket immunity from prosecution for any crime that might be thus disclosed." The current decision does not mean that hereafter no one will go to jail for refusing to testify before congressional committees. The general rule is that "the public has a right to every man's testimony." Nor has a witness a right to keep silent because his testimony may expose him to disgrace or public contempt. Only if his testimony might subject him to prosecution does he acquire a right to withhold it.

Back in 1857 Congress sought to take away from recalcitrant witnesses this limited privilege of silence by granting a broad immunity to prosecution to persons who testified before its committees. As a result, criminals began voluntarily to disclose their crimes in order to escape punishment. Congress tried to close up that loophole and went too far in the other direction. The Supreme Court held this act unconstitutional and made it clear that no witness pleading self-incrimination can be compelled to testify before congressional committees unless he is given complete immunity to prosecution for any offense he may disclose. A later case indicates that in some instances a witness who talks freely without claiming any privilege of immunity obtains immunity anyway.

Congress might by law grant its two houses authority to compel some witnesses to talk by permitting them to grant immunity on a selective basis. The danger is that, in their eagerness to run down facts, congressional bodies might sometimes give immunity to criminals under investigation by the Department of Justice. The right of inquiry must be balanced against the necessities of law enforcement. In the exercise of the power to grant immunity Congress would certainly have to work with the Attorney General to avoid encroachment on the law-enforcement function. And it might be reluctant to let the Attorney General veto a proposed congressional grant of immunity. At the same time it is clear that in many instances the public interest in compelling a witness to speak is much greater than in any probable prosecution for offenses he might disclose. The problem of how to balance these conflicting interests is an extremely perplexing one that demands the attention of the experts in both the executive and legislative branches.

Formosa First

The recklessness of Senator Knowland's devotion to Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek reached what we can but hope was its apogee in the course of the Senate debate on Monday on emergency relief assistance for Yugoslavia. Senator Knowland endeavored to tack on to the bill providing such assistance a rider which would have forbidden the President to send food to the Yugoslavs until he had first committed 38 million dollars in aid to the Chiang Kai-shek regime in Formosa The effect of this rider would have been not merely to penalize the Yugoslavs for the sake of a futile gesture toward the Chinese Nationalists; it would also have been, as Senator Connally suggested, to precipitate an all-out war with Red China.

The momentous issue wrapped up in Senator Knowland's bland proposal deserves rather more consideration than it could be accorded in the 20 minutes which the Senate had allotted to debating amendments to the Yugoslav relief bill. The bill itself had been carefully considered, as such measures should be, by the Foreign Relations Committee. But the amendment, which would have had a far more momentous influence upon American foreign policy, was sprung upon the Senate without warning—without any prior opportunity for committee hearings or committee consideration. And, of course, it was patently not germane to the bill itself.

To argue in behalf of the amendment, as Senator Knowland did, that it would do no more than prod the President into granting aid to Chiang Kai-shek which Congress had previously authorized is to obscure the realities of the present situation. Conditions in the Far East are now markedly different from what they were when the aid to Chiang was originally authorized. Indeed, the American aid given to Chiang in the past had much to do with shaping the disagreeable reality of the present. Additional aid given to him now would entail an incalculable cost in American blood.

"We all admire," said Senator Connally with pointed irony, "the zeal with which the Senator from California rushes forth, sword in hand, whenever anyone mentions the Chinese Nationalists or Chiang Kai-shek. It is really a fine, loyal position for him to take." A majority of the Senate fortunately is capable of taking other factors into account. Formosa is not the first among American interests. And there is more involved in the support of it than appears to be dreamed of in Senator Knowland's philosophy.

Confirmation Gantlet

A man who says that he was a Communist in 1935 and that he is not a Communist today is making a determined effort to keep Secretary of Defense George C. Marshall from employing Mrs. Anna Rosenberg as an Assistant Secretary of Defense. Secretary Marshall, a careful man of proven patriotism, selected Mrs. Rosenberg because he thought she had special qualifications for handling the difficult problem of manpower mobilization. And indeed Mrs. Rosenberg has a long, open record of distinguished public service which bears out the Secretary's judgment. Her record was so impressive that the Senate Armed Services Committee unanimously recommended her confirmation on November 29.

But along came Mr. Ralph De Sola with the assertion that he had been introduced to Mrs. Rosenberg 15 years ago, had been told by somebody at that time that she was a Communist and had seen her at several meetings of a Communist-front organization. Mrs. Rosenberg has categorically denied this in every detail. Mr. De Sola—whose story, incidentally, is not supported by his divorced wife, who was also a member of the party at the time referred to—may well be telling the truth as he recalls it after a lapse of 15 years; and his purpose may be patriotic as he understands the term. But there is also a possibility, of course, that his recollection is faulty and that his patriotism is as unstable as it was when he joined the Communist Party in the 1930's. It would no doubt be quite as difficult for Mr. De Sola to prove that he had in good faith left the party as it would be for Mrs. Rosenberg to prove that she had never entered it.

It is vitally important that the Senate be on guard against confirmation of a disloyal person to a sensitive defense position. But it is equally important that it be on guard against the kind of sabotage which might seek to deprive the Nation of needed skills by besmirching the reputations of loyal citizens. Mrs. Rosenberg has already paid a painful price for her acceptance of a presidential nomination. Her experience, even if she is confirmed, as we presume she will be, is likely to be discouraging to other able Americans of unblemished reputation who may be asked to serve their country in a period of crisis. The cost of Government service may come to seem prohibitively high if it entails the running of a gantlet in which a nominee may be bludgeoned by anyone who used to be a Communist.

Combat Pay

One thing that must make infantrymen in Korea boil is the knowledge that members of other services are receiving hazardous duty pay while their own sacrifices are not so recognized. Any reading of casualty statistics shows where the bulk of the hazards lie. Yet an Army draft bill to provide extra combat pay for the men doing the fighting is stuck somewhere in the Department of Defense, and there is some suspicion that elements in the Air Force and Navy are opposing it for fear of losing some of their own perquisites.

It is true that congressional consideration of combat pay might reopen the controversial issue of extra pay for regular flying personnel and members of submarine crews. That, however, is scarcely the point. Flyers and submariners are now receiving extra pay, as are airborne troops, divers and certain other categories of specialists, for duties that cannot compare in hazard with those of the frontline GIs. Yet the infantrymen are not receiving even the $10 a month combat pay voted them during World War II.

The Army draft bill would provide $50 a month additional for enlisted men and $100 for officers in units actually doing the fighting—in infantry or armored regiments or smaller units and in supporting contingents such as artillery and combat engineers. This would in no way preclude recognition of similar hazards in other services such as the Marines. It is not possible, of course, to place a financial value on the sacrifices in Korea; but the extra pay would at least be a token of appreciation to the men whose lives have been in constant danger. If the bill does not emerge from the Department of Defense shortly, we suggest that Congress inquire about it.

HOUSE INTO TREE

But leave a house to time, to rack and ruin, snow and rain
With years and weather it takes back a tree's own silver grain—

Those little shelves of lichen, true and trim, as for a pantry;
The woodmouse and the chipmunk, too,
and other forest gentry.

And offers without stint or guile
the sanctuary of its eaves
To birds who take up domicile as in a bishop's sleeves.

The vines creep in where shingles fail.
At night, grown strangely limber,
It combs the stars with every gale
like green and living timber . . .

Mark how, at length, the thin roof sunk,
this house will lie, its soul escaped,
Like some great fallen tree with trunk fancifully shaped!

"The Conspiracy Trial"

I would like to reply to Mr. Barbee's letter which appeared on November 26.

Mr. Barbee, in referring to Ben Perley Poore's edition of The Conspiracy Trial, states that Poore's edition of The Conspiracy Trial is not a very rare book, or rare at all. It can be picked up in almost any second-hand book store. Mr. Barbee goes on to say that this work was "republished by a subscription book store in Michigan and peddled by its agents from door to door over a good portion of the Northern States."

I thoroughly disagree with Mr. Barbee. I have been an expert in the field of Lincolniana for the past 20 years and, according to some authorities, it has been said that I have bought and sold more Lincoln books than any other person now alive. Yet, I have no recollection of ever having handled a copy of the so-called Michigan reprint of Ben Perley Poore. Neither is there any record in any of the great Lincoln collections of such an edition. I am afraid Mr. Barbee has this confused with another book.

It is indeed interesting to me to learn that the three volumes of Poore can be picked up in almost any second-hand book store, since I can easily sell the three-volume set for a thousand dollars. I have sold four sets of this work in the last 20 years—many of the major Lincoln collections of the world have either none of the volumes at all, or only the first two volumes. Incidentally, until the Library of Congress acquired the Alfred W. Stern copy, I believe that institution lacked volume three.

Negro Commissioner

The impending vacancy on the Board of Commissioners for the District will afford another opportunity to implement the civil rights program by executive action by the appointment of a Negro to the position as evidence that such appointments are not based on race or creed. Not only does the Negro population of the District warrant this recognition but also such an appointment would make it impossible for the White House to be embarrassed as it was this week when an Indian delegate and Negro delegate were refused service at a local hotel in consonance with the local pattern of segregation. It is our considered judgment that such appointment would not only advance the cause of democracy in this country but would also have a profound effect upon world opinion which would unmeasureably strengthen the hand of the United States in the present world crisis.

Jury Duty

Having just finished a month of jury duty, I read certain parts of your December 3 issue in the light of that experience. The background article entitled "Sensational Type of Newspaper Is Fading" suggested to me a way to bring home to the citizens of our communities the full meaning of our jury system as contrasted with trials in totalitarian countries.

By reporting and describing a typical case in a criminal court there is a real opportunity to show democracy in action. It would create among the high school pupils (for whom these articles are prepared) as well as among their parents an awareness that certain phases of democracy are practiced daily in their own cities. God In The U. N.

I am neither a Catholic nor a Seventh Day Adventist. But two small items in your December 6 issue certainly impressed me. One, the Rev. F. J. O'Connell's decrial of the snubbing of God in the United Nations. The other, a report that the Adventists were instituting a strong campaign of prayer for a just world peace.

All my life I have heard ministers declaiming the power of faith and prayer. Yet in these critical hours how many spiritual leaders make it their primary responsibility to invoke that power for the good of mankind? How many rise regularly in their pulpits and strongly remind their followers that the faith which can "move mountains" should, if ever, be practiced now? How many strongly and continually exhort their congregations to fall to their knees, as groups and individuals, and pray for freedom, democracy, truth, and the end of war?

I salute Father O'Connell, and the Seventh Day Adventists. Invite God to attend a few sessions of the United Nations. And let everyone who claims to be a spiritual leader organize his followers and pray! M. H. M.

McCarran On Acheson

I am sure there must have been millions of mothers and wives whose hearts rejoiced—as mine—when they heard Democratic Senator Pat McCarran joined the Republican group which is fighting to restore our confidence in our State Department—men who think it more important to save the "faith of the American people" rather than save "face for dear old Acheson!" Thank God for Senator McCarran and his courage to defy party for principle.

Mr. Truman And Mr. Hume

President Truman was a father long before he was President. His outstanding characteristic of loyalty to country, family and friends is the reason he holds the position he does today in this great Nation.

Mrs. Truman and Margaret are the essence of refinement. Margaret has a beautiful voice. She has the personal courage and the love of her parents to make it a great one. Margaret is a credit to our Nation and a model for our young people.

Mr. Hume damned with faint praise. This is the most insulting form of criticism. Our President is too much of a man to stand for this.

On December 8 the Washington Daily News published a note written on White House stationery and signed HST intemperately denouncing the musical editor of The Washington Post for an adverse criticism of Miss Margaret Truman's singing, and on December 11, a columnist of the News gloated over scooping The Post on its own story.

Evidently the President, a very outspoken man and worn down by stress of the responsibility of his high office, cut loose with an indiscretion in a moment of exasperation. But his indiscretion was not nearly as reprehensible as that of the News in publishing the incident. What use did the News expect the Communists to make of the story? The Post is to be congratulated upon its discreet propriety in refraining from publishing the matter, but the action of the News was an inexcusable abuse of the freedom of the press.

I have been a paid subscriber to The Washington Post for 10 years. I think it is disgusting that, in order to get the inside news, we must read another paper for the most accurate account available, while The Post has the original. Is this more of your effort, notably persistent, to cover up for the Administration? Why don't you print a photo of the Truman letter and fulfill your obligation as a newspaper.

I, as an American, am outraged by the vicious, vulgar attack by Mr. Truman upon Paul Hume. I am not acquainted with Mr. Hume, but have long recognized his musicianship and honesty.

Defense Status Of Teachers

By Malvina Lindsay

Need of Insignia

SPEAK OF recruiting for defense, and you vision men and women donning uniforms at training camps; housewives valiantly leaving kitchens and nurseries to work in factories; civilian volunteers (of course with insignia or uniforms) preparing to give their all as aircraft spotters, motor transport drivers, bandage rollers.

But what of the teacher in the school room? Where does he come into the defense picture? Does he—or more often she—have even an armband to emphasize the importance of the defense service schools are rendering?

One of the greatest civilian defense needs now developing is for trained persons to handle children. More nursery schools, more day care centers are needed for the children of mothers who will work. There were even suggestions at the recent Midcentury White House Conference on Children and Youth for putting elementary schools on a 12-month-basis (in event of total mobilization), with specially trained emergency staffs to direct defense programs for children.

Yet this call for trained persons comes at a time when a new teacher crisis has arisen. Seventy-five thousand teachers, not available, are needed right now for the elementary schools of the Nation. School enrollment in these is soaring and is expected to do so for most of the decade. Yet fewer young people are training to become teachers. And the national emergency is expected to drain teachers from the schoolroom into the armed services, into war production, into what many of them feel is a more "active part" of defense.

MANY CITIZENS aware of this crisis feel that some dramatic national or State action is needed to meet it. Some would have the teaching profession put on a Selective Service basis with teachers given draft deferment. And some ask: Why not put teachers in uniform or give them insignia to mark their defense status? Many men teachers, it is pointed out, leave the school room for the armed services because of criticism they would face if they remained in "civies." In the last war the women's armed services drew many of their best officers, as well as many enlistees, from the schoolroom.

Unless teaching is given more patriotic prestige this situation will repeat itself under the rearmament program. Yet, as Dr. Allison Davis of the University of Chicago told the White House conference, "the survival of the United States as a major power depends directly and chiefly upon the public schools." Rejection rates under Selective Service resulting from deficiencies in schooling have been running disturbingly high—an example of how closely related the schools are to defense.

Many teachers will have strong temptation to leave low paid teaching jobs for better opportunities in industry. It will cost communities more to hold them. With higher taxes that will be a hard dose to take. Yet, as Dr. Benjamin Spock of the Rochester Child Health Institute, reminded the White House Conference, the proportion of national income going to public education has been falling in recent decades, and is smaller proportionately here than in Great Britain or the Soviet Union.

TEACHERS also will be influenced by the patriotic appeal. They will want to serve in defense where they feel their work is counting for the most. States and communities can do something—even by means of insignia—to give the teacher patriotic prestige, to make the public understand how vital the work of the teacher is in time of crisis.

There is need to recruit not only teachers but all those who have had any training in the care of children. Yet the volunteer for defense usually thinks of more dramatic spectacular activity.

The country is said to have more trained nursery school workers than ever before. Yet there is a shortage of the nursery school service needed even for a civilian economy. And there is a tremendous crop of young children, far greater than at the beginning of the last war, that would have to be cared for if housewives returned to industry on a large scale.

Dr. Lois Stolz of Stanford University proposed at the White House Conference that States now pass permissive legislation for a 12-month-a-year school defense program and that training of emergency staffs for this get under way. Federal funds for such a project should be sought, she said.

But above that is the problem of merely holding the line for the school system of the country. One help in doing this could well be a national appeal for teachers to stay at their posts in line of defense duty and for communities to give them more support and prestige in such service.

"Appeasement"

Bravo for your editorial of December 8 on the "imposter-word" of "appeasement." The following comes from a letter I wrote in 1940, when I was a pronounced "interventionist."

"The word 'appease' . . . should not be made into a body. Because Chamberlain's 'appeasement' policy was wrong . . . it does not follow that all 'appeasement' under any circumstances is wrong . . . Evidently if there had been a greater spirit of appeasement' between (sic) the various groups in England, the 'appeasement' of Hitler could have been avoided. But if the various groups within a country refuse to take any steps to 'appease' each other, they are very likely to be forced into a position where all of them will have to 'appease' an outside force." Matter Of Fact

By Joseph and Stewart Alsop

Advice From Winston Churchill

CERTAIN aspects of politics are like certain diseases, which are so painful even to think about that healthy people rarely mention them. But if a man or woman has cancer, it must be mentioned by the doctor who makes the diagnosis and prescribes the operation. And if a nation is in imminent peril of catastrophe, painful things must also be said by leaders who have courage.

No leader in the western world has greater courage than Winston Churchill. No one any longer will lightly disregard the voice of the great old man, who almost single-handed saved the cause of freedom from the menace of naziism; who was the first, after the war, to see the larger menace of the new Soviet imperialism. And it is time, now, to face up to the real future of the advice he has been giving for the past two years.

It was just about two years ago that Churchill began a remarkable series of speeches of which the last was delivered on November 30. In all these speeches, whether on the public platform or in debates in the House of Commons, he has said the same things.

First, he has ascribed to the Kremlin an ambition of world empire. On November 30, he told Parliament:

"(Despite) enormous increases of power and territory, (the Soviets) show no sign of being in any way satiated, satisfied or even contented, and we can perceive no limits at present to their aims."

SECOND, he has flatly stated that the Soviets were only being restrained from launching a third world war by the American advantage in atomic weapons. At Llandudno in 1948, he said: "Nothing stands between Europe today and complete subjugation to Communist tyranny but the atomic bomb in American possession."

Third, he has more and more openly confessed despair of matching the Soviet power by ordinary means, at least in the crucial time before our own advantage in atomic weapons will be too greatly impaired by production of atomic weapons in the Soviet Union. In the last speech, in which this despair is total, he said:

"While it is right to build up our forces as fast as we can, nothing in this process will in this period deprive Russia of effective superiority in what are now called 'conventional arms.' All it will do is give us increasing unity in Europe."

Fourth, he has repeatedly advocated negotiations with the Soviet Union on the highest level. In the most powerful and terrifying of all these speeches, when he told the House of Commons last July 7 that "We are more defenseless than we have ever been," he also said:

"A peaceful settlement may (yet) be reached with the Soviet government if a resolute effort is made on the basis not of our present weakness but of American atomic strength. This is the policy which gives the best chance of preventing a fearful war and of securing our survival should it break upon us."

HERE, however, so awful, so awe-inspiring is the subject, that even Winston Churchill has not spoken plainly. There is plenty of internal evidence of his real meaning, such as the critical reference, in the last speech, to the assurances to the Kremlin that "the United States would not fight what is called a preventive war." There is his further remark that "on this basis the war, if it comes, and God forbid, will come at the moment of the (Soviets') choosing." But his real meaning, which he has stated frankly enough in many private conversations, is only broadly implied in his speeches.

This meaning is that the Kremlin should be given a straight choice by the United States and Britain, between peace now and war now. "The high and secret processes of diplomacy" would be employed, under the Churchillian prescription, to offer Stalin a world settlement on honorable terms, and to warn that our atomic bombs would be used if the settlement were refused. This, indeed, is the only conceivable way to seek a settlement "on the basis of . . . American atomic strength."

It is dreadful that the wisest leader of the West should have been driven, only five years after a great victory, to advocate such an expedient. It is obvious that the most careful consideration should first be given to the kind of world settlement to be proposed, to the probable Soviet response ,and above all, to our "atomic strength's" practical value. But it is also certain that if the odds on an early war at a "moment of the Soviets' choosing" are already two or three or four to one, as they undoubtedly appear at present, Winston Churchill's advice at least deserves to be honestly and carefully canvassed.

Gov. Long Tells Bookies to Close In New Orleans

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 13 (AP).—About 95 percent of the race horse handbooks in the New Orleans metropolitan area were closed down today after Governor Long sent in State troops with orders for the bookies to close up or be "smashed up."

Police Superintendent Joseph Scheuering said the five percent still operating were "bootleg bookies," running on a "sneak basis."

The Governor said he ordered the investigation after "authoritative reports" that more than 100 horse race handbooks were operating in the city.

Controls Coming

By Marquis Childs

No Compromise With Inflation

AT AN early date it is expected that national emergency powers will be evoked and widespread controls applied to the Nation's economy. Still in the debate stage is the question of how far these controls should go.

Childs

Astonishing as it may seem in view of what is happening, there is considerable pressure behind a move to resort to a halfway measure. Controls would be applied to prices, but they would not be applied to wages.

This pressure comes from within the White House and the Bureau of the Budget. For the most part it is obviously political in motivation. Labor would be highly pleased at this exemption since it would seem to support the thesis of many trade union chiefs that wage increases can come out of profits without any boost in prices.

But, obviously, such a halfway step would not work economically. And politically it would produce an angry backfire. Therefore the likelihood is that the pressure will be ignored and controls will be clamped on both prices and wages.

The probability is for a price rollback to the level of two to three months ago. The wage freeze would be certain to work hardships in some instances. Therefore machinery would be created to consider the exceptional cases where real injustice could be shown.

THE PICTURE of the inroads made by inflation as presented by Secretary of Defense George C. Marshall and Undersecretary Robert Lovett is a startling one. Last September Congress appropriated $15,736,094,000 to supplement the regular defense budget. This was for planes, tanks, bazookas and all the other complicated equipment of modern war that would start rearmament in earnest.

Today those billions are being spent through the award of contracts to companies all over the United States. But the dollars will buy today only about two thirds of what they would have bought less than three months ago. That is because the price tag on everything has been marked up and then marked up again and again.

This is an oversimplification and in a sense an exaggeration. But it is close enough to the fact to give overwhelming weight to the argument of military planners for immediate controls and the swiftest possible speed-up of military production.

When he spoke at the CIO convention in Chicago three weeks ago, Secretary of the Interior Oscar Chapman used some graphic figures to illustrate the devastation worked by the price spiral. He listed the numbers of planes, tanks, bazookas and so forth that could not be purchased with the money available because all these things cost so much more than they had in mid-September.

Although in normal times Chapman is an advocate of the Truman Fair Deal, he is one of those in the Administration most acutely aware that this is a time of gravest crisis. Significantly, Chapman is arguing on the side of the necessity for both wage and price controls.

WHEN General Marshall told the Senate Appropriations Committee in executive session that the Administration was considering imposing controls, he was speaking according to careful plan. That committee is known at the Pentagon as "the sieve." Therefore Marshall went over with President Truman on what he intended to say. It was agreed that the "leak" on Marshall's testimony, which could be expected in the normal course of events, might actually be a constructive service if it contained the notice that controls were under consideration.

There was no need to argue with members of the committee about controls. Almost without exception what they wanted to know was why they had not been put on before. Since late last summer when Congress passed the Defense Production Act, the Administration has had the authority. It was granted on a stand-by basis at the specific request of the White House. The President was fearful that mandatory controls would be unenforceable in a period of only partial mobilization.

There will be a test of American character when the controls are applied. To many Americans the war still seems, even after the Korean reverses, remote and they are demanding to know what we are doing there anyway. In the light of this attitude there will be strong temptation among some to flout the restrictions.

That is the chief reason the Administration has hesitated to apply them. But that decision cannot be longer delayed. If with the magnificent example of the bearing of American soldiers and Marines under adversity, we here at home cannot exercise a minimum of self-restraint, then we might as well find it out at once.

OF BOOKS AND BRENTANO'S

Some weeks ago we wrote a piece about birds, and were rather startled to discover just how many enthusiastic bird-watchers lurk in Washington and environs. Since that time another book on the subject has been published, and we've hunted up two others which are regarded more or less as classics. Clad in sneakers, then, and with binoculars in hand, let us prowl again into the subject of bird books . . . A new revised edition of a guide that has sold over a million copies has recently been published. BIRD GUIDE: LAND BIRDS EAST OF THE ROCKIES (regular edition $1.50; De luxe edition $1.95) has more than 300 new full-color plates, covering 222 species. Each page has a full-color bird illustration and an identifying description. It's completely indexed, of course, and the only difference between the two editions is in the cover . . . John James Audubon was probably the greatest of American naturalists, and certainly the greatest of all bird-painters. The best of his famous paintings—288 of them—have been selected for the popular edition of AUDUBON'S BIRDS OF AMERICA ($2.95). The Chairman of the National Audubon Society has written a splendid new introduction, discussing Audubon and the manner in which his fame has grown since his death nearly a century ago. Each of the full-color plates is accompanied by a concise descriptive text . . . People who live in the suburbs are realizing more and more the enduring pleasure birds around the house can bring. A very simple and practical book, HAND BOOK OF ATTRACTING BIRDS ($2.75), tells how to bring birds to your place, how to feed them, how to take care of them and why it is such a keen delight to have them. There are ambitious week-end fanciers . . . .

Key Testimony In Rosenberg Case Denied

By The Associated Press

Senators said yesterday that two men had denied key testimony by a witness who alleged that Mrs. Anna Rosenberg, President Truman's nominee for Assistant Secretary of Defense, attended Communist meetings in the 1930's.

Senator Cain (R., Wash.), demanded that somebody be prosecuted for perjury. He didn't say who.

"This is a clear case of perjury," Cain, a member of the Senate Armed Services Committee, told reporters.

The committee on November 29 unanimously recommended that the Senate confirm Mrs. Rosenberg as Assistant Secretary of Defense.

Since then it has reopened its closed-door hearings to consider charges by Ralph De Sola, admitted former Communist, that he knew Mrs. Rosenberg as a Communist and saw her at meetings of the John Reed Club, a Communist organization, in New York City, some 15 years ago.

Mrs. Rosenberg has denied all his and similar charges and confronted De Sola face-to-face before the committee last Friday.

De Sola Contradicted

Today the committe heard two key witnesses who De Sola had claimed could corroborate his charges.

The witnesses were:

James McGraw of New York City, a public relations man, who denied knowing Mrs. Rosenberg, and denied being a Communist or a member of the John Reed Club.

Isidore Schneider, also of New York City, who refused to say whether he was or is a Communist, but denied knowing Mrs. Rosenberg or about the John Reed Club meetings.

Senator Russell (D., Ga.), acting chairman, told reporters that first McGraw and then Schneider had contradicted pertinent parts of De Sola's testimony about Mrs. Rosenberg.

McGraw himself told reporters as he left the committee room:

After McGraw's appearance, Russell commented:

"If he is to be believed, then De Sola is thoroughly discredited."

De Sola had told the committee that McGraw recruited him as a Communist and had pointed out Mrs. Rosenberg to him at some meetings of the John Reed Club.

Schneider Reads Statement

But McGraw, according to Russell, said he was never a Communist or a member of the John Reed Club, and did not know Mrs. Rosenberg.

Other senators said that Schneider read a brief statement denying key points in De Sola's testimony and then asked to be excused.

He was questioned at length, however. Senators reported Schneider said he came to this country from Austria-Hungary, was a writer, and refused to answer questions about Communism on the Constitutional ground that he might incriminate himself.

"There can be no question but that some people are guilty of perjury and must be exposed," Cain said. "It has to be a case of perjury by some one because all witnesses have been placed under oath."

The closed-door hearings will continue today when two witnesses identified as former FBI agents, are to testify. They publish "Counter Attack," described by senators as an anti-Commuist periodical, in New York City. They were listed as T. E. Fitzpatrick and K. M. Bierly.

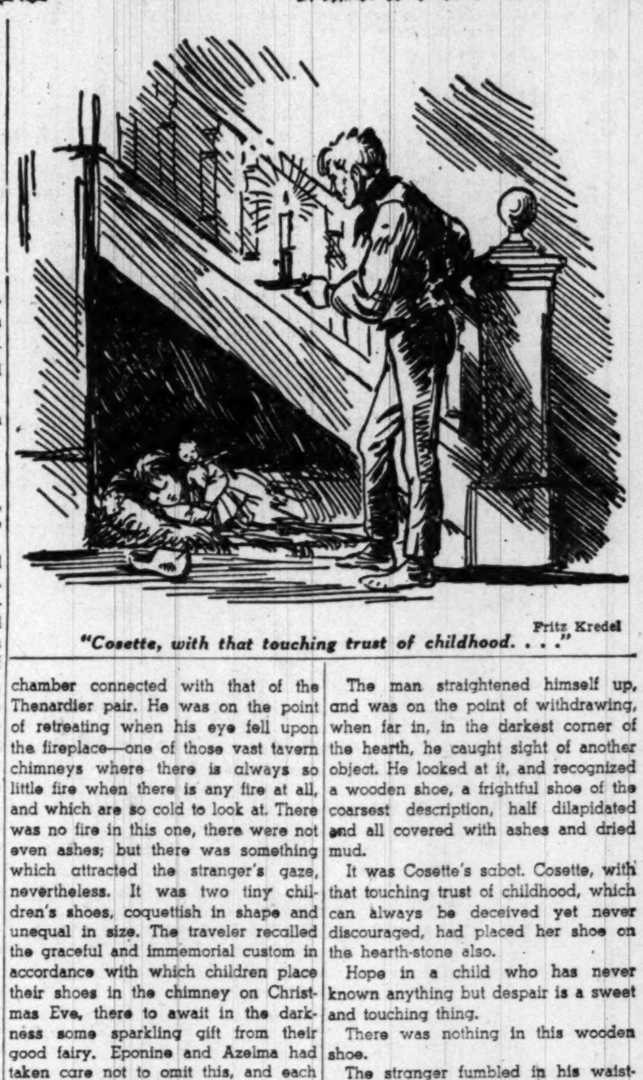
The World's Greatest Christmas Stories

Cosette

This is the third of a two-week series of selections from "The World's Greatest Christmas Stories," a new anthology edited by Eric Posselt.

Today's story is by Victor Hugo (1802-1885), the prolific French poet and novelist, one of the great figures of French literature. The translation is by Isabel F. Hapgood.

By Victor Hugo



Fritz Kredel

"Cosette, with that touching trust of childhood. . . ."

THE INN-KEEPER retired to his room. His wife was in bed, but she was not asleep. When she heard her husband's step she turned over and said to him:

"Do you know, I'm going to turn Cosette out of doors tomorrow."

Thenardier replied coldly:

"How you do go on!"

They exchanged no further words, and a few moments later their candle was extinguished.

As for the traveler, he had deposited his cudgel and his bundle in a corner. The landlord once gone, he threw himself into an armchair and remained for some time buried in thought. Then he removed his shoes, took one of the two candles, blew out the other, opened the door, and quit the room, gazing about him like a person who is in search of something. He traversed a corridor and came upon a staircase. There he heard a very faint and gentle sound like the breathing of a child.

He followed this sound, and came to a sort of triangular recess built under the staircase, or rather formed by the staircase itself. This recess was nothing else than the space under the steps. There, in the midst of all sorts of old papers and potsherds, among dust and spider's webs, was a bed—if one can call by the name of bed a straw pallet so full of holes as to display the straw, and a coverlet so tattered as to show the pallet. No sheets. This was placed on the floor.

In this bed Cosette was sleeping.

THE MAN approached and gazed down upon her.

Cosette was in a profound sleep; she was fully dressed. In the winter she did not undress, in order that she might not be so cold.

Against her breast was pressed the doll, whose large eyes, wide open, glittered in the dark. From time to time she gave vent to a deep sigh as though she were on the point of waking, and she strained the doll almost convulsively in her arms. Beside her bed there was only one of her wooden shoes.

A door which stood open near Cosette's pallet permitted a view of a rather large, dark room. The stranger stepped into it. At the further extremity, through a glass door, he saw two small, very white beds. They belonged to Eponine and Azelma. Behind these beds, and half hidden, stood an uncurtained wicker cradle, in which the little boy who had cried all the evening lay asleep.

The stranger conjectured that this chamber connected with that of the Thenardier pair. He was on the point of retreating when his eye fell upon the fireplace—one of those vast tavern chimneys where there is always so little fire when there is any fire at all, and which are so cold to look at. There was no fire in this one, there were not even ashes; but there was something which attracted the stranger's gaze, nevertheless. It was two tiny children's shoes, coquettish in shape and unequal in size. The traveler recalled the graceful and immemorial custom in accordance with which children place their shoes in the chimney on Christmas Eve, there to await in the darkness some sparkling gift from their good fairy. Eponine and Azelma had taken care not to omit this, and each of them had set one of her shoes on the hearth.

THE TRAVELER bent over them. The fairy, that is to say, their mother, had already paid her visit, and in each he saw a brand-new and shining 10-sou piece.

The man straightened himself up, and was on the point of withdrawing, when far in, in the darkest corner of the hearth, he caught sight of another object. He looked at it, and recognized a wooden shoe, a frightful shoe of the coarsest description, half dilapidated and all covered with ashes and dried mud.

It was Cosette's sabot. Cosette, with that touching trust of childhood, which can always be deceived yet never discouraged, had placed her shoe on the hearth-stone also.

Hope in a child who has never known anything but despair is a sweet and touching thing.

There was nothing in this wooden shoe.

The stranger fumbled in his waistcoat, bent over and placed a louis d'or in Cosette's shoe.

Lloyd's Gives 50-1 Odds Against War by Sept. 21

TORONTO, Dec. 12 (AP).—Lloyd's of London is quoting 50-1 odds against a world war before September, 1951. The firm has insured the Canadian Philatelic International Exhibition against hostilities interfering before the convention opens here September 21.

Lloyd's is charging a premium of 2 percent on the insured value of the stamps, Exhibition Manager Leslie Davenport reported today. That works out to 50-1 odds.

Apathetic Drivers Menace Firemen Answering Alarms

Washington motorists yesterday were asked to show more regard for firemen going about their work.

The appeal came from Lieut. Alvin E. Davis, president of the Firemen's Association, who said the situation is becoming "alarming" as motorists show "increasing apathy and disregard of apparatus responding to fire alarms and while at work."

"The hazards of firemen while responding to alarms are certainly great enough without the additional risks of motorists driving between, alongside, and in front of apparatus," said Davis.

"During the winter months when auto windows are closed and radios are playing, it is even more important to be alert to warning sirens," he said.

Davis said that one of the most common faults of motorists is their failure to stop or pull over when they hear a siren. "Instead, they wait to see," he said. "Many fail to yield the right of way, and some even pass the engines.

"We are not out to have people locked up, but we want them to realize the equipment is heavy and not too maneuverable."

Davis' plea has been emphasized by the serious injury of Fireman Walter E. Gaiges of Engine Co. 18, who was struck by a motorist while directing equipment into the station recently. Davis said: "We fervently hope a fatal accident will not be the means of cruelly awakening the motoring public to this need for adherence to traffic regulations."

Post Calendar To Be Shown By Carriers

Washington Post carriers, faithfully at your door 365 days a year, will be knocking to say "Merry Christmas" and display calendars for '51, beginning today.

The calendars, purchased by the boys for their subscribers, are considered the most attractive they have ever offered.

Color photographs of Washington scenes are featured. The pictures include the Capitol, Jefferson Memorial at cherry blossom time, Mount Vernon, Supreme Court Building, Lincoln Memorial, and the White House.

Because of the typical features of the Washington scene they present, the calendars are not only an adornment for the home but make an attractive gift for those living outside the Washington area.

The custom of newspaper carriers offering calendars during the holiday season is an old one. Old-timers say that it dates back more than 50 years. The boys' return from the calendars is their own; it is not shared with anyone.

Bar Association To Hold Institute On Tax Problems

The District Bar Association will hold an institute on "Legal Problems in Tax Returns" Saturday at the Mayflower Hotel.

The institute will consist of three lectures. Speakers and lecture times are: James A. Moore, a partner in the Philadelphia law firm of Pepper, Bodine, Stokes and Hamilton, 9:30 a.m.; Joseph W. Price 3d, who teaches taxation at Temple University Law School, 11 a.m.; and Herman H. Krekstein, a Philadelphia lawyer, author and lecturer on tax problems, 2 p.m.

Casket Company Sued Over Funeral Mishap

CHICAGO, Dec. 12 (AP).—A St. Paul funeral home sued the Chicago Casket Co. yesterday for $15,246 damages.

The suit, by Louis N. and Roman M. Adam, partners in a funeral home, charged a casket supplied by the Chicago Co. was "defectively manufactured and constructed of inferior materials."

The partners charged in their Federal court suit a body fell from the casket during a funeral December 20, 1945.

County Planting Roses to Halt Soil Erosion

Soil conservation as well as beauty is served by a new project of the tree division of the Montgomery County Department of Public Works.

Approximately 16,000 multiflora rose seedlings are being planted on embankments along county roads in the suburban area by 20 employes of the tree division, according to Greydon S. Tolson, chief of the division.

The banks will be beautified by the flowers but the major purpose is to prevent soil erosion on roadside banks, Tolson said. The seedlings were obtained from the Soil Conservation Service.

The activity is only one of many carried on by the tree division. Last spring 1750 trees were planted along public streets and highways and this fall 2125 were planted.

A program of pruning and removal of dead and diseased trees has been set up so that every tree in the entire suburban area is visited at least once in each 18 months.

The tree division removed approximately 53 trees infected with Dutch Elm disease and has diagnosed at least the same number on private property. Trees must be removed from private property by the owners, however, since no funds are provided for this service.

The division is working on an all-out control plan for the Dutch Elm disease. An ordinance which will require prompt removal and burning of infected trees has been requested and probably will be enacted at the May legislation session of the County Council.

Failure to remove and burn infected trees often means spread of the dread disease which is threatening America's elms with extinction, Tolson said.

Most of the trees planted on the county streets and roads now are oaks, maples and sweet gums, Tolson said, although there are a few variations to meet types already planted in the older areas.

D. C. Leaders See High Level For Business

Three Washington leaders agreed yesterday that business conditions here should continue at a high level in 1951, but——

It will be an unhappy problem-loaded and worrisome prosperity, with the Kremlin see-sawing the economy.

The trio spoke at a luncheon meeting of the Advertising Club in the Statler. J. A. Livingston, business columnist, served as moderator of the panel discussion.

Here are the summarized views of the speakers:

Charles B. Dulcan, sr., executive vice president and general manager of The Hecht Co.: Business will be good in Washington next year. As a token of optimism, Hecht's is spending 12 million dollars in nearby Virginia on the assumption that retail business will warrant the expenditure. However, these days anything can happen and frequently does. How can you decide anything for the future unless you know what the Kremlin is thinking?

Shortages of manpower, materials and supplies and possibly rationing will be among the major problems of the coming year, as well as higher taxes, inventory controls and civilian defense.

John A. Reilly, president of the Second National Bank: Business, measured by dollar volume, will be good in 1951. But dollar volume is not the whole story. Unit volume is also important. Disposable income in this city is now at an all-time high of 1.4 billion dollars. This means that business will be good only if we have sound dollars to work with. Inflation must be curbed. It is common knowledge that one of the Communists' main interests is sapping our economic strength. Inevitably, Washington's and the Nation's outlook will be linked to war developments.

Ralph L. Goldsmith, vice president and general manager of Lansburgh & Bro.: The first quarter of 1951 is as far as anyone can forecast at this time. The next three months should be good, because present inventories are adequate. Beyond the first quarter, business will be as good as the availability of merchandises. As is well known, the hard lines have carried sales of the big stores this year. Soft lines have not been active for some time. For the coming year, the psychology of the public on war news is going to be the big factor in business. Higher taxes and what spendable income is left will be another. The inflationary trend is bound to continue.

Livingston, in his summary, emphasized that a nation cannot impose a defense economy upon a peace economy. "Something must give."

Transit Co. Votes 4 For 1 Stock Split

A four-for-one stock split was approved yesterday by stockholders of Capital Transit Co. at a special meeting.

Of the 240,000 outstanding shares, 192,465 were voted in favor of the proposal. Only 1164 shares were opposed.

As originally recommended by the board of directors, the shares would be increased to 960,000 and par value would be reduced from $100 to $25. Intrinsic value of the shares would not be changed, but their marketability would be enhanced in the directors' opinion.

The effect of a four-for-one stock split is merely comparable to changing a dollar into four quarters.

The split plan still is subject to authorization by the Public Utilities Commission and the Interstate Commerce Commission. The PUC has scheduled a public hearing on December 15 and the ICC on December 18.

Louis E. Wolfson and his eight associates, it was learned yesterday, now own about 53 percent of Capital Transit's outstanding shares. Wolfson has increased his personal holdings from an original 51,000 shares to 58,124.

Market price of Transit stock has risen to about $35 a share since the Wolfson group purchased stock control in mid-1929 at $20 a share. The annual dividend rate has been doubled to $4 a share.

At the PUC hearing an investigation will be instituted to determine whether or not a capital surplus should be created against which the amount of $5,550,000, now recorded on the company's books under "road and equipment, unclassified," can be charged.

"The creation of a capital surplus," the PUC has stated, "would entail a reduction of the aggregated stated value of the capital stock of the company and a corresponding reduction of the par value of each share of capital stock."

Report to House Group Points Out Need for Unemployment Pay

Robert C. Goodwin, director of Labor's Bureau of Employment Security, yesterday made the case for unemployment compensation coverage for Federal employes before the Forand subcommittee of the House Ways and Means Committee.

He said:

That employes dropped from the Government have relied on retirement fund withdrawals and accrued annual leave to tide them over. But temporary-indefinite employes now being hired will be covered by Social Security, not Civil Service retirement, and they won't get withdrawals from Social Security. In addition, lump-sum annual leave payments will be reduced because of the congressional rider which requires annual leave earned this year to be taken, or else lost, by next June 30.

That the protection of Federal employes under unemployment compensation may be regarded as part of our defense or preparedness planning for future peacetime purposes as Government employment will decline sharply sometime in the future.

CAPITOL HILL: Representative Carlyle (D., N. C.) has resigned from the House Post Office and Civil Service Committee to become a member of the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee. Half a dozen other members of the committee are reported to be seeking other assignments.

INTERIOR: A survey of its field offices has been made by a private management firm. One recommendation: that the field offices of Geological Survey be overhauled and streamlined.

NOTES: Arthur D. Swanson has been elected president of the AFL's American Federation of Government Employes lodge at the Naval Research Laboratory here. Ray Di Selvester is vice president; Cleone K. Burton, secretary-treasurer, and George H. Ward, sergeant-at-arms . . . Civil Service has tests open for occupational analyst, $825 to $6400 starting salaries, to fill openings in defense agencies; engineers, all branches, $4600 to $6400, and junior agricultural assistants, $3100 . . . Dr. Charles W. Beckett has joined the thermodynamics staff at the Bureau of Standards . . . William Oncken is the new training officer of Navy's Bureau of Ordnance. He rtansferred from Navy's Ordnance Laboratory.

PAY TABLE: General Accounting has issued a new pay table to govern salaries to be paid to the more than 200,000 indefinite employes who will be covered by the Social Security system on January 1.

The Social Security check-off is very simple to figure—it's 1½ percent of the gross salary on everything up to the frist $3600. The indefinite employes, those under Social Security, won't be covered by the Civil Service system which makes a flat deduction of 6 percent from the salaries of all employes under it.

HATS OFF to the Budget Bureau and Civil Service people who worked for nearly five years on a new and streamlined system to maintain Uncle Sam's personnel records.

Chairman Harry B. Mitchell of Civil Service yesterday headed a group of top officials from the Commerce Department and Budget Bureau that heard the system praised as both efficient and economical.

They gathered at the Census Bureau to witness a demonstration of the system and they were told: (1) that it saves Census $1200-a-month; (2) that employe morale in the personnel office is 100 percent better under the new system; (3) that employe turnover in the personnel office has been greatly reduced, and (4) that paperwork has been cut tremendously by the new system.

Several agencies that used up to 33 different personnel forms now use the single standard form. The personnel office of Securities and Exchange has been able to reduce its personnel staff by using the new records system. Fifty other agencies and installations also have adopted it.

To be expected, some agencies won't even consider it, And a few others have complicated matters by making the new system merely a part of their record-keeping. They won't give up their red tape and paperwork until they are cracked—and hard.

Hear Problems

Recreation Workers See Board Session

Almost 300 D.C. Recreation Department workers crowded into the District Building board room yesterday in a precedent-setting meeting to watch their bosses—the Recreation Board—in action.

In a 2½-hour session, the rank and file learned what the board was up against. Here are some of the problems wrestled with yesterday:

1. Chairman Harry S. Wender announced the board will join the Board of Education Friday at 11 a.m. in a session with the National Production Authority to press for exemptions from the agency's freeze order on recreational building.

The ban has halted erection of field houses at Fort Stanton and Langdon Park playgrounds and may postpone much of the Recreation Board's program for next year.

The school board is concerned because of its plans for construction of a new stadium at Coolidge High School and additions to the present Eastern High School stadium, as well as other projcets.

Golf Contract Approved

2. The Recreation Board approved details of a contract with the Interior Department for taking over the public golf courses here from S. G. Loeffler, concessionaire.

Included in this was a provision that "all uranium, thorium" and other materials suitable to the production of fissionable materials found on the lands are reserved for the use of the Federal Government.

The agreement yesterday clears the way for city operation of the courses once Congress grants $275,000 with which to buy out the Loeffler equipment and operate the facilities.

3. A committee was appointed to study a request by the District Motor Vehicle Parking Agency for erection of parking meters on a strip of the Emery Estate at Georgia ave. and Madison st. nw.

4. A letter was sent to The Washington Post expressing appreciation for a $1000 gift from the proceeds of the National Celebrities tournament. This was used for the Walter Johnson baseball leagues conducted by the Recreation Department.

Pool Receipts Drop

5. A report by board vice Chairman James E. Schwab on a sharp decline in swimming pool receipts was referred to a study committee on department procedures. Schwab said the receipts declined 66 percent from 1948 to 1950, when the Interior Department operated the pools on a non-segregated basis.

The entire department stood in a moment of silence in marking the recent death of Richard S. Tennyson, director of the city-wide division

Wender praised the department workers for their efforts in bringing service to District residents and said the meetings with the board will become an annual event to improve "personal contact between the employes of the department and the board members."

Meeting with the board for the first time, all members of the department stood up individually and announced their name and title to the board members, after which Wender introduced the board members and top officials

Bus Line Won't Take C. T. Co. Transfers; Fare Boost, Up to 25 Cents, Due Today

About 400 Washingtonians who ride the Capital Transit and the W. M. and A. Motor Lines to get to Government offices in Suitland, Md., will have to pay 25 cents more for their round-trip beginning today.

The Washington, Marlboro & Annapolis bus firm announced yesterday that it would no longer accept a Capital Transit transfer, together with five cents on the outbound route from Barney cir.

Nor will it issue, after this morning, an inbound transfer from Suitland to the District for use on Capital Transit vehicles.

The W. M. & A. cash fare interstate—District to Maryland, and Maryland to District—on the "Suitland local" is strictly 15 cents now. Passengers who in addition, use CTC to get between their homes and Barney cir. would have to pay the 15-cent CTC fare—or use a pass or token—each way.

Agreed in 1942

The W. M. & A. decision is based on two tricky transportation terms: interstate—between the District and Maryland in this case, and intrastate—strictly in the District iself.

In 1942, Capital Transit and W. M. & A. agreed to accept each other's transfers within the District. The District Public Utilities Commission gave its blessing to this intrastate agreement.

But about this time, said a W. M. & A. official, the line began honoring Capital Transit transfers interstate.

This meant that a passenger could ride Capital Transit to Barney cir. and get a CTC transfer. With that and a nickel—both surrendered at the end of the interstate line—he would ride out to Suitland on the W. M. & A.

Returning, he paid 15 cents at Suitland and obtained a transfer that Capital Transit honored on city connections.

Reviewed Tariffs.

But Monday, the official explained, W. M. & A. reviewed its tariffs as filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission and found a revision was in order.

Yesterday morning, passengers boarding at Barney Circle were told the interstate transfer deal was off.

Within the District—intrastate—W. M. & A. will still accept Capital Transit transfers, and vice versa.

W. M. & A. has another Suitland line: From 11th st. and Pennsylvania ave. nw., to Suitland and points east. The fare on this line has been 15 cents ever since it opened, in 1932. Since it is entirely an interstate line, no transfers have ever been honored on this line.

The two government offices primarily served on the "Suitland local" route are the Navy's Hydrographic Office and the Census Bureau.

Tenant Must Give 30-Day Notice or Pay, Court Rules

A tenant must give written 30-day notice to quit or be liable for 30 days rent, the Municipal Court of Appeals ruled yesterday.

Landlords must give tenants 30 days notice, the court said, and "the statute clearly contemplates that the reverse shall be true."

The decision overrules Municipal Court Judge Frank H. Myers. He awarded Mrs. Martha K. Miller two months rent for a garage from A. C. Plumley, 702 5th st. nw., who vacated without notice on August 1, 1950.

House to Act On D. C. Rent Bill Thursday

McMillan Approves Extension; Favorable Action Predicted

Chairman John L. McMillan (D., S. C.) yesterday called a House District Committee meeting for 11 a.m. Thursday to act on the Senate-approved two-month District rent control extension.

McMillan said he favors the bill. It advances the expiration date of the District rent control law from January 31 to March 31, 1951.

Representative Sid Simpson, (R., Ill.) said he never has voted and will not vote on Thursday in favor of rent control. But he predicted the District rent extension will would be approved. Simpson is ranking Republican member of the committe.

Representative A. L. Miller (R., Nebr.), a member of the committee, said he felt Congress should go along with the Senate-approved rent bill for the District since the same termination date had been fixed by Congress for the rent ceilings imposed by the separate Federal rent law.

The March 31 date was set at President Truman's request in a bill on which Congress completed action Monday and forwarded to the White House.

The Senate bill for District rent control extension provides only for the two-month advance in the terminal date of the local controls, and makes no other changes in the existing law.

Barron Leaves Net Estate Of $22,635

Carter T. Barron, theatrical official and civic leader, who died November 16, left an estate of $43,635 in assets and $21,000 in debts, it was learned yesterday.

The listing filed in probate papers in District Court does not include property Mr. Barron held jointly with his wife, nor does it include life insurance, his attorney, John Doyle, said.

The probate petition said that there was $10,000 in cash, $32,000 in securities, and the rest in personal effects. No real estate was listed, but his attorney said Mr. Barron owned his home at 6661 Barnaby st. nw., jointly

The widow, Mrs. Velna S. Barron, will receive the entire estate

Mr. Barron was very active in civic affairs here, was a friend of Presidents and as eastern division manager of Loew's Theaters was considered the ambassador of the movie industry to Washington.

Goes to NCHA

Commission Okays Pact On Housing

The District Commissioners approved and sent to the National Capital Housing Authority yesterday a proposed cooperation agreement which both must sign before NCHA's 4000-unit housing program can get out of the planning stage

NCHA has sought such an agreement for 14 months. If it approves the commissioners' version, it can then proceed to seek Federal loans to buy sites and start construction. But it may have another wait there. Federal housing officials have indicated recently that most public housing not connected with the national defense program will probably be shelved for the present.

The proposed agreement provides that:

1. NCHA will pay the District in lieu of taxes 10 percent of rents, excluding utility charges:

2. Within five years the District will tear down, or have repaired, substandard dwellings equal in number to new units built by NCHA. This provision would go out the window if an acute housing shortage continues.

3. The District will provide the same services to NCHA projects that it does to private residences.

4. NCHA will give first and equal preference for housing to persons evicted by NCHA and District slum clearance projects.

Disagreement on the last point had been one reason for delay in signing the agreement. The commissioners wanted NCHA to reserve a specified number of units for families who may be evicted by a slum clearance project. NCHA said this was illegal, but agreed to the provision as it now stands.

Another reason for delay was the commissioners' reluctance to sign an agreement before the sites were selected. They approved the nine sites last month.

John Ihlder, executive director of NCHA, said he thought the commissioners and NCHA were "practically in agreement."

Held on Mails Charge, Man Sent to Hospital

Henry F. Gaston, 60, Cottage City, Md., was arraigned before U. S. Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence yesterday on a charge of sending obscene matter through the mail to an 18-year-old girl.

At Gaston's request, Lawrence waived preliminary hearing and recommended to the United States attorney that the defendant be hospitalized.

Delays Urged In Housing to Help Schools

Corning Declares Education Building Needs Are Primary

A program of coordinated community planning that would hold up construction of large housing developments until provision is made for schools was proposed yesterday by School Superintendent Hobart M. Corning.

The school head told members of the Board of Trade's education committee that the school system has no forewarning of big projects. As a result schools are frozen out when its comes to buying undeveloped sites in mushrooming communities.

Dr. Corning outlined the problem of the schools in keeping up with the fast-growing child population after leading two dozen members of the committee on a tour of seven schools in Southeast Washington.

The businessmen visited classrooms in morning, ate a 50c school lunch at the Anacostia High School cafeteria, and in the afternoon attended a lecture and film explaining the school's distributive education program. Under the program students spend part of a day in the classroom and the rest of the day employed in some local concern.

Lofton S. Wesley, chairman of the education committee, said that the tour had brought out a need for long-range planning for schools.

Wesley said that "more coordination" between the District government and the school administration would be "helpful" particularly in planning for the purchase of school sites.

The tour took in:

The Negro Douglas Junior High School, an old elementary school remodeled for temporary use as a junior high school;

Negro Birney Elementary school, finished last year but already occupied above capacity;

Patterson and Congress Heights Elementary Schools where more than 15000 children are on part-time;

The new Simon Elementary School which will relieve the Patterson and the Congress Heights but which will be filled nearly to capacity when it is opened next week;

Kramer Junior High School where receration rooms have been partitioned off into classrooms to take care of more students.

Pilot Rescued From Bay After 2-Plane Crash

Marine Reserve Fliers in Mid-Air Collision While on Training Jaunt

Two Marine Corps F8F Bearcat fighters crashed yesterday near Patuxent, Md., and the pilots of both walked—or swam—away from the crash.

More than two hours after the wreck at 4:14 p. m., the pilot of one plane, which crashed into Chesapeake Bay after hitting the other, called in from the only store on Smith Island, near the scene of the accident, and reported he was unhurt but soaking wet and cold.

He was First Lieut. Ulyssis A. Knight, 29, of Burnsville, W. Va., who, officials of the Naval Air Station at Anacosita feared, had died in the crash of his plane.

The second lucky Marine was First Lieut. George Byers, 26, a Georgetown University law school student, who made an emergency landing at Webster Field, near Patuxent, after the crash.

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

LIEUT. ULYSSIS A. KNIGHT

. . . Pilot unhurt after crash

The pilots, all Marine Reservists, were joining up for formation near Patuxent when Knight's plane rammed into Byers' plane.

When Knight called in from the Smith Island store, he told Anacostia officials he had gone into a "deep dive" with a badly damaged left wing. He said he pulled out and, although his propeller was broken, managed to make a "fairly decent landing" on the water.

The plane sank, and he floated 15 minutes in a life jacket before a fishing boat picked him up.

Youth Hurt By Exploding Blasting Cap

A 16-year-old Bethesda boy yesterday suffered injuries that may cause him to lose the sight of one eye when a dynamite cap with which he was playing exploded.

John Nichols of 6603 Clarendon rd., Bethesda, was touching the cap with the wires of an electric-train transformer when it went off.

Montgomery County police found nine more caps and a stick of dynamite in the youth's possession. Young Nichols said they were given to him by a 12-year-old boy, who in turn told police he stole them from the Stonehurst Quarry on River rd. in Bethesda.

The 12-year-old boy was released in custody of his parents pending action of the juvenile court.

Nichols, who suffered multiple abrasions, was in Episcopal Eye, Ear and Throat Hospital for further examination of his eye.

Citizens Irate

Kensington Dog Shelter Plan Fought

Irate Kensington citizens, 150 strong, invaded the Montgomery County meeting at Rockville, Md., yesterday to demand abandonment of a plan for establishing a dog shelter at Kensington.

Eugene Liipfert, 10520 Ewell ave., Kensington, spokesman for the group, told the council that in addition to being "an arrogant ill-considered course," the purchase of the 2½ acres for the animal sheler is in violation of the county charter because Forest Chapman, one of the heirs to the Chapman estate, which owned the land, is an employe of the present dog pound. The county charter prohibits any official or employe from having any dealing with the county in the purchase or sale of property.

Liipfert contended the advertisement for the public hearing was carried in a newspaper having little or no circulation in the community and that it failed to carry the proper location of the plot. He urged a public hearing be held.

Council President J. Louis Monarch told the group the county now is committed to the purchase of the land whether it uses it for a dog shelter or not and that the council will consider the matter and decide whether a second public hearing should be held.

Acting County Attorney J. Hodge Smith said the interest of Chapman is not enough to be in violation of the charter provision, that negotiations were carried on entirely with Frank R. Long, trustee, and the the county had not known Chapman was an heir. The provision is only intended to permit the council to void a contract which was believed dishonest, he said, and leaves such action to the discretion of the Council.

Mrs. Stella B. Werner, Democrat, said she had not gone along with other members of the council in denying a second public hearing last week.

The Kensington group, bearing placards: "Kensington Won't Go To The Dogs," filled the hearing room to overflowing.

In other actions the council instructed County Manager Irving G. McNayr and Civil Defense Director Edward L. Foster to prepare a plan for a permanent civil defense office.

Foster suggested a permanent office with clerical help be provided. He declined a suggestion by McNayr that he be appointed full time. Foster, a lawyer, said he could not afford to take the paid post. He is a volunteer.

No opposition was voted at a hearing on purchase of 6737 square feet at Walsh st. and Wisconsin ave. at a cost of $13,474 for a public parking lot for Bethesda but the council withheld action until later. Public hearings will be held January 3 at 8 p. m. in the Bethesda County Building on purchase of 39,577 square feet near the proposed extension of Arlington rd. at a cost of $79,154 and for 16,946 square feet on Elm st. near Wisconsin ave., at a cost of $25,419.

Salary of Acting County Attorney J. Hodge Smith was raised to $7500, an increase of $750.

A resolution from the county farm bureau was referred to McNayr for study. The resolution opposes increase in the police force, complains of a bottleneck in the public works department hindering construction of roads, opposes construction of anything but classrooms for county schools and urges abolition of the personal property tax.

Former Postmaster Guilty of Forgery

French S. Brawner, former postmaster at Dumfries, Va., was convicted in Federal Court at Alexandria yesterday of 59 charges involving forgery and passing forged documents.

A jury of 12 men deliberated exactly two hours before returning the guilty verdict. Its finding climaxed a five-day trial.

Judge Albert V. Bryan, at the request of defense attorney T. Brooke Howard, deferred imposition of sentence pending a probation officer's investigation. On each count, the gray-haired, 61-year-old former postmaster can receive up to 10 years in prison and a fine of $1000.

Brawner originally was indicted on 60 charges. They were: forgery of 29 government checks, passing the same number of forged checks, forging a postal money order and embezzlement of a letter in which one of the checks was mailed.

Judge Bryan, in instructing the jury yesterday, threw out the mail embezzlement count on the ground that theft was implied in the forgery and uttering charges.

The Government presented two handwriting experts who linked Brawner's handwriting with signatures on the forged checks. Most damaging testimony, however, came from a Dumfries woman who testified that Brawner reimbursed her "from his own pocket" for the amount covered by one of the checks.

It was Brawner's second trial within a year for forgery. In December, 1949, a jury in the same court deliberated 20 minutes and acquitted him of a charge of forging a check that passed through his postoffice.

D. C. Postal Clerk Held In Mail Embezzlement

A Washington branch office postal clerk, who, inspectors said, admitted taking more than 250 letters from the mails in six months, was held for grand jury action yesterday on a charge of embezzling from the mail.

The clerk, James L. Williams, 26, of 2220 Bryant pl. se., was employed at the Connecticut ave. Branch Annex of the District Postoffice. Bond was set at $1000 when he was arraigned yesterday before U. S. Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence.

Inspectors told Lawrence they received complaints from several business concerns in the past three weeks that they failed to receive a number of letters containing money.

Williams was trapped, inspectors said, after they posted "dummy" letters in the mail. He was arrested yesterday at the branch office when inspectors saw him take from mail he was handling a letter addressed to a loan company and containing $7.60, they reported.

Church Must Pay

Property Rented Out Held Taxable

The Prince Georges County Commissioners yesterday refused to exempt from taxes a piece of property next to and owned by the Hyattsville Presbyterian Church at 42nd ave. and Farragut st.

The property was bought from former County Commissioner T. Hammond Welsh after lengthy litigation in which Welsh questioned the legality of the construction of an annex to the church.

The matter was settled in favor of the church last October by the County Board of Zoning Appeals. The board granted an exception to zoning regulations to permit completion of the partially built annex despite its encroachment beyond the building setback line on Farragut st.

The commissioners denied the church's application for tax exemption on recommendation of Supervisor of Assessments Louis W. Kutsch. Kutsch pointed out that to qualify for tax exemption, the land must be used exclusively for church purposes. The property in question, he said, is rented out by the church for $75 a month.

In a letter received by the commissioners yesterday, George Hammond, director of safety and education of the District Branch of the American Automobile Association, urged the appointment of more police and the assignment of one officer to full-time safety work with the schools.

Hammond pointed out that Prince Georges is second only to Baltimore County in the number of fatal traffic accidents in the State. It is also the only county in the local area without a full-time school safety officer, he said.

Dr. Beckett Appointed to Dynamics Post

Dr. Charles W. Beckett, research scientist, has been appointed to the thermodynamics section of the National Bureau of Standards, it has been announced.

In his new capacity, he will be active in preparation of tables of thermal properties of gases, a research project

Dr. Beckett for the past two years was associate supervisor of the literature survey group at Ohio State University, also dealing with thermodynamics.

First Act to Be Passed by Congress in District

SIXTH CONGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES:

AT THE SECOND SESSION.

Begun and held at the city of WASHINGTON, in the territory of Columbia, on Monday, the ſeventeenth of November, one thouſand eight hundred.

An ACT

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America, in Congreſs aſſembled,

Speaker of the House of Representatives.

Vice President of the United States and President of the Senate

Washington December 15 A.D. 1800 Approved

John Adams

President of the United States

I certify that this act did originate in the House of Representatives.

150 YEARS AGO—This bill, approved by President John Adams 150 years ago this Friday, was the first act passed by the Congress after it moved to the District of Columbia from Philadelphia. In fact, it was the only bill passed in the second session of the Sixth Congress, which met here in November and December of 1800. The bill, extending the franking privileges to the delegate from the Northwest Territory, bears the signatures of Theodore Sedgwick, Speaker of the House; Vice President Thomas Jefferson, and President Adams.

Clara Priest Dies; Widow Of Pastor

Mrs. Clara E. B. Priest, 85, widow of a pastor of the Philadelphia Methodist Conference and intermittent resident here for 15 years, died here Sunday of a heart ailment.

Born in Philadelphia of Quaker parents, she attended Woodstown, N. J., schools and the Pennington, N. J., seminary. Her husband, the Rev. John Priest, died in 1921.

Besides her daughter, Mrs. Esther Priest Montague, 3406 N. Abingdon st., Arlington, she leaves a grandson, H. Colton Montague, an American University student.

Funeral services will be held today at 2 p. m. in St. Mary's Episcopal Church, 26th st. and Glebe rd., Arlington. A second service will be held Thursday in the Grove Methodist Church, Whitford, Pa., followed burial in the family plot.

Mrs. Priest had asked that instead of flowers, contributions be made to the Red Cross at St. Elizabeths Hospital for an entertainment fund for shut-ins.

Prince Georges Faces Shortage Of Teachers

Prince Georges County faces its most serious mid-term teacher shortage since World War II.

This was told to the County Board of Education at its meeting yesterday in Marlboro by Superintendent of Schools G. Gardner Shugart.

On January 1, he said, there will be 21 vacancies—mostly in the elementary schools.

Prospects of filling these vacancies with certified teachers are "not good," he said. Under the school law, however, teachers without college degrees can be hired as substitutes.

Shugart attributed the shortage to three factors—armed forces calls, the general country-wide teacher shortage and the county's low pay scale in comparison with other Maryland counties.

Teachers' salaries in Prince Georges run from a low of $2200 for a beginning teacher with a bachelor's degree to $4000 for a teacher with 15 years' service and a master's degree.

Funeral services for Col. Russell Brown Patterson, 61, (USA, retired), who died Monday at Walter Reed Hospital after a brief illness, will be held at 1 .p m. Friday at Fort Myer Chapel, with burial in Arlington Cemetery.

Col. Patterson

A native Washingtonian who attended McKinley High School, Col. Patterson was a son of the late Walter Brown Patterson, for many years director of special activities of the District public schools, and Mrs. Nellie Cate Patterson.

He was graduated from Dartmouth College in 1911 and received his master's degree from Georgetown University. That year he passed the examination for a commission in the regular army, which he entered as a second lieutenant of cavalry.

At the time of his death, he was studying for a doctor's degree in history at Georgetown.

He was on the staff of the Army War College here during World War I, after which he served from 1919 to 1923 with the Army of Occupation in Europe. He also saw service at Columbus, Ohio; Corregidor, and Fort Leavenworth, Kans., besides duty with the Adjutant General's Department in Europe in World War II.

It was one of his official duties as Adjutant General of the Fifteenth Army, relatives recalled, to inform Mrs. George S. Patton of the death of her husband, the famous general who led the Seventh Army across the European continent.

Colonel Patterson concluded his service at Fort Meade, Md., with the Second Army.

Following his retirement on disability after 30 years' service in 1948, he made his home in Statesville, N. C., the birthplace of his wife, the former Katherine Kincaid, who survives.

Also surviving are two sons, Kincaid and Walter Brown Patterson, both of Statesville; a daughter by a previous marriage, Jeanne Beth Fair of New York City, and two sisters, Mrs. Harvey A. Harding, 4629 Rosedale ave., Bethesda, and Mrs. Raymond N. Wells, 2707 Mosby pl., Alexandria.

D. C. Man Struck By Train Near Mount Rainier

A Washington man was struck by a Baltimore and Ohio freight train early yesterday near Mount Rainier, apparently as he was walking along the tracks.

The man, Richard M. Shareve, 45, of 157 Yuma st. se., was admitted to Prince Georges General Hospital with shoulder injuries and possible fractured ribs. His condition was said to be good.

Engineer William N. Hoshall, of Baltimore, told Prince Georges County police, he felt a bump as the train neared the District Line and stopped the train. Shareve was found, lying beside the tracks by the conductor, he said.

Tough Chandler Shot Down by Baseball Politics

With Shirley Povich

POVICH

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., Dec. 12.—The lame duck High Commissioner of Baseball, A. B. Chandler, who was winged the night before by seven disgruntled major league club owners, today was bagged for keeps. They popped him into the sack as he hobbled to a fighting stance and was making gestures of defiance.

Tough old bird Chandler, who once boasted that "baseball politics are pink tea compared to the hard school of Kentucky politicking I grew up in," learned today of the blunderbuss fire power of club owners bent on bringing him down.

Earlier in the day, he was still battling 'em. Counting on the loyal support of the nine owners who had voted for him in a showdown in which he was defeated by seven opposition votes, two more than the five necessary to reject him, Chandler still had hopes of salvaging a new term.

And then in a super-special late afternoon session, the whole kit and kaboodle of them pole-axed him with a 16-0 vote in favor of a new commissioner.

Until that happened, Chandler was still confident he could rally and wangle the votes to save his job. A stunned and shaken man the night before when he was coldly told without warning that the anti-Chandlers had mustered the ballots to kill off a new term, Chandler this morning had landed on his feet, composure-wise. He was almost buoyant despite his slapping around.

What happened to the nine who had been with him the night before? That was the unkindest blow. High pressured to avoid a wide rift in the high councils of the game that might lead to a loss in public confidence, their insistence on Chandler's reelection melted.

It was summed up best, perhaps, by General Manager Billy Evans of the Detroit Tigers, who on instruction of Owner Walter O. Briggs, had cast one of the original votes in favor of Chandler.

"What could we do?" said Evans, after the later unanimous decision to show Chandler the way out. "Chandler was badly hurt by the action of the night before. We could not leave him to bleed for the next 16 months. It was better that we put him out and get it over with."

At 11 a. m. Tuesday he issued a statement declaring he had no intention of resigning in the intervening 16 months, and reminded his opposition:

"Nine of the 16 clubs in the majors supported me. A majority of the club owners in the National and American Leagues voted to stand by me, my administration and the things for which I have stood in baseball, and the things I have accomplished."

He took a crack at the secret, hideaway session of the club owners at which he was rejected for a new term:

"I was voted into office in an open and announced session of the responsible men of the major leagues and it might have been a stronger tribute to the game if the meeting in which I failed to get the support of seven clubs had been conducted after that American pattern."

Chandler added, "I have never run away from a situation and certainly I am not disposed to retreat from the one that confronts me now."

It was a walloping rebuff to the ringleaders of the anti-Chandler group who had hoped he would up and resign in an eight-cylinder huff.

HOW THE whole overthrow of Chandler came about, at a time when most baseball sources were confident his reelection here this week would be a mere formality, now takes rank with the question of who threw the overalls in Mrs. Murphy's chowder?

"What happened?" he is still asking himself. It was that kind of a shocker.

In Chandler's view, the top malcontents are Fred Saigh, owner of the St. Louis Cardinals, and Del Webb, co-owner of the New York Yankees. They are the acknowledged ring leaders of the anti-Chandler movement, although only Saigh had previously been open-voiced in his opposition.

That it was an inside job, is obvious. Chandler had no warning of how the opposition was crystalizing, and neither did the owners friendly to him. The ringleaders apparently picked their spots smartly, enlisting only the on-the-fence club owners and swaying their votes. They approached none of the owners friendly to Chandler, like Clark Griffith and Walter O. Briggs, jr., who might have given him warning of the storm and enabled the Commissioner to thunder in his own behalf.

The generalship of the anti-Chandler group was of a bright pattern. Webb was set up as chairman of the special meeting, and at his right was another anti-Chandler man as secretary, Bob Carpenter, president of the Phillies.

They agreed that there would be no show of hands, only a written ballot, to avert a situation in which the hatchet men might have to stand up and be counted.

Saigh unquestionably emerged as the Little Giant of the successful coup. He engineered it at a time when there was be-

Chandler Refuses to Resign, Owners Give Him Gate Anyway, Begin Hunt for New Man

NOT SO HAPPY—Baseball Commissioner A. B. (Happy) Chandler, voted out of office by major league clubowners in session at St. Petersburg, Fla., was deluged with messages and calls from all parts of the country. Here he sits glumly at the telephone in his hotel room

Fans Should Be Told Why 'Happy' Fired

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

Senator George W. Malone (R., Nev.) said yesterday he was "deeply concerned" over baseball's ouster of Commissioner Chandler—and not just because "Happy's" a good friend of his.

"This thing could have serious repercussions," Senator Malone said. "I think baseball has a duty to the American people to show where Chandler has done a bad job.

"There may be details I know nothing about. Certainly, no one wants a man continued in a job if he can't handle it. But the big thing to me is to find out if he's being fired for incompetence or because of a personal grudge.

"If the latter is true, then baseball is plowing up its own reputation. It means that baseball does not want a czar. It wants someone to pose as a czar while stockholders control him at their whim.

People Watch Closely

"That's what I believe a lot of people are watching closely. And they're not all in the United States Senate."

Elsewhere in the Senate two "candidates" popped up for the job as Commissioner of baseball. Actually it means that the names of Snator Edwin C. Johnson (D., Colo.) and Senator Scott Lucas (D., Ill.) merely were mentioned.

Asked about the report, Senator Johnson said: "It won't amount to much. I'm for 'Happy' Chandler and wouldn't even consider it under these circumstances."

Senator Johnson, non-salaried president of the Western League for the past four years, just returned from the minor league meeting at St. Petersburg, Fla.

He's Stunned, Too

He said: "I'm stunned by what has happened. There was nothing in the wind down there and I thought Chandler was riding high, wide and handsome."

Lucas, outgoing Senate majority leader who was defeated for reelection by Republican Everett Dirksen, was chatting with newsmen about Chandler's ouster.

"That might be a spot for you," a reporter said to him.

Lucas, presumably joking, replied: "Say, it might be at that. Why don't you fellows go out and promote me?"

Lucas is a former minor league ballplayer. He played from 1913 to 1916 for Pekin in the old Illinois-Missouri league and led the batters with a .350 average. He moved to Peoria and Bloomington in the Three-I League. He quit baseball at the age of 22 to practice law.

'Well, I'll Be Doggone'

Happy Chandler's 80-Year Old Dad Acts as Surprised as Everyone Else

CORYDON, Ky., Dec. 12 (AP).—The failure of the major leagues to renew the contract of Baseball Commissioner A. B. Chandler was a surprise to his father here today.

"Well, I'll be doggone," declared 80-year-old Joseph Chandler when informed that his son's contract had not been renewed. "I sure am surprised. I had been reading that everything was all right and it was all over but the shouting. I am sure sorry to hear about it."

Chandler hinted that his son might return to politics. When asked what he thought the Commissioner would do when his contract expires in May, 1952, the elder Chandler chuckled:

"Well, a lot of people have wanted Albert to get back into politics. But I've always told him to stay out as long as he had his baseball job."

A. B. Chandler was a State Senator, Lieutenant Governor, Governor and U. S. Senator before becoming baseball commissioner.

His father is generally regarded as Corydon's first citizen and has attended all the World Series games since his son became baseball commissioner.

Mlkvy Leads Temple To Easy Win Over GW

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

Temple had an easy time of it last night, drubbing George Washington, 84-64, for its fourth straight victory as about 600 customers looked on at Uline Arena.

A 6-foot 4-inch junior with the unusual name of Bill Mlkvy contributed 26 points and a grand floor performance to the Temple triumph. And by this time, Coach Josh Cody must be thinking that Mr. Mlkvy is a pretty consistent ball player.

Mlkvy scored 30 against Delaware and 26 each against Philadelphia Textile, Muhlenberg and now GW.

The Colonials were completely outclassed except for the first 8 minutes of the first half when they held the visitors to a 17-17 tie, and in the first five minutes of the second half when they whittled a 17-point deficit down to 50-46.

It all added up to GW's second straight loss.

Lumbering Ace Adler, 6-feet, 5-inches, got the assignment of guarding Mlkvy, and he did a fine job for 10 minutes, holding him to one field goal. In that time, GW had a 17-17 tie.

But Mlkvy appeared to get faster and stronger as Adler's strength ebbed, and the visitor started to hit. He had 13 by halftime. At one point in the first half, Temple led, 43-26. At halftime, it was 47-33.

In the preliminary George Washington's freshmen piled up a 16-point lead midway in the first half, and then hung on to win, 69-68.

Kentucky 1st In UP Poll, Bradley 2d

NEW YORK, Dec. 12 (U.P.).—Two victories jumped the University of Kentucky to the top of the basketball heap today as 35 of the Nation's top coaches ranked the Wildcats No. 1 in the United Press weekly ratings.

But how long the Kaintucks can remain up there is another matter—it looks like a rugged season.

Kentucky polled 306 points out of a possible 350 in the voting

And City College of New York, last week's leader? Its surprise loss to Missouri had far-reaching effects. CCNY was plummeted from the top to sixth place, while Missouri, heretofore unranked, became No. 11.

The United Press basketball ratings (first-place votes in parenthesis):

Clubs Doubt They Can Put Chandler Out

From Wire Dispatches

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., Dec. 12.—Whether the club owners of baseball can force A. B. Chandler from office as Commissioner before the end of his elected term, May, 1952, remains to be seen.

There is much confused thinking on the matter for there is no clear-cut baseball rule on the subject.

Dan Topping, New York Yankee president, said: "The clubowners probably could terminate the contract before it expires. It would take unanimous vote. Chandler told us he would not resign. He's in there at least until we find a replacement."

Others said they are "not sure of the law." It is a highly involved situation that probably will occupy the league lawyers for several weeks. The next full scale meeting on the Commissioner problem is tentatively set for February.

Big Whip Over Them

Chandler insisted in a spirited statement today that he would serve out his remaining 18 months. But baseball men are afraid of being ruled by a "lame duck," especially since he could throw out of baseball anyone—conceivably anti-Chandler clubowners—for "conduct detrimental to baseball." Under baseball law, there would be no appeal.

The situation seemed to be this: The baseball men will start looking for a new commissioner. When they find one, they'll ask Chandler again to quit. If he refuses, they may go to court, since their lawyers say they would win. Meanwhile, they'll have to work under Chandler—but the power he holds over them will make them operate fast.

Lou Perini, president of the Boston Braves, quoted Chandler as sayiny: "I have every intention of fulfilling my office. There are some things I have to clean up and I think I can be of benefit to baseball."

Reached in his hotel room after the club owners made their ouster decision, Chandler had this to say:

Not a Step Back

"I went in (to the meeting) and I told them the whole story. I did not recede from my stand earlier in the day."

The Commissioner mentioned the pension plan for players, huge World Series television fees, record attendance, settlement of the Mexican League problem and legal solidification and financial strength as some of his administration's accomplishments.

"After I leave, if I have achieved nothing else for the game," he said, "I wish to be able to point to the solidity and financial functioning ability of the pension fund which I set up."

"I want to complete certain commitments concerning World Series television which will make the pension fund a working and substantial factor in our game and protect our players in the years of retirement."

It still was not precisely clear why Chandler was voted out.

Topping, leaving today's meeting, said: "Why did we do this? Why, I'd imagine it was an overall thing. They didn't think he was doing a good job."

No Attempt Is Made To Buy Up Contract

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., Dec. 12.—Baseball's 16 major league club owners late today unanimously showed the gate to Commissioner A. B. Chandler and bade him "exit" 16 months before his seven-year contract expired.

In an unprecedented meeting held to determine the future of Chandler, who was denied a new contract at an action the night before, the owners today rejected the Commissioner's dramatic plea for reelection.

The notice to Chandler that he was not desired either for a new term or the fulfilment of his current contract that runs until May, 1952, was couched in the polite language of a formal statement at the end of the meeting. It read:

"Inasmuch as there has, on three separate ballots, been insufficient votes to reelect Commissioner A. B. Chandler to a new term, it is the unanimous vote of the 16 major league clubs that a new Commissioner be selected and elected as soon as practical."

That was it, with the nine clubs of the pro-Chandler group melting before the opposition of the seven clubs which the night before had denied him reelection. The anti-Chandlers at that time summoned two more votes than the one-fourth required to reject him.

Chandler himself had requested that he be permitted to make an appearance before the club owners late this afternoon. Tom Yawkey of the Red Sox and John Galbreath of Pittsburgh escorted him from his hotel into the session at baseball headquarters.

Amid reports that the owners were attempting to buy up the remainder of Chandler's $65,000-a-year contract, first intimation that the Commissioner's pleas for reelection was a failure came when he made his way out of the meeting 20 minutes after he had entered it.

At that time, he paused in the hotel lobby to greet Edward B. Eynon, secretary of the Washington club, and ask innocently: "Will anybody go bail for me?"

Chandler addressed the owners for 10 minutes. He recited his contributions to the game, asked for a new vote of confidence. The statement brushing him off was issued 30 minutes after he departed, announced jointly by Presidents Will Harridge and Ford Frick of the two major leagues.

There was no attempt to buy up Chandler's contract, according to Yankee President Dan Topping, one of the owners who voted against him. "Maybe we'll have another meeting and consider many things," Topping said.

Topping declared that Chandler withheld any offer to resign before his term expired, and said "I guess he's still the Commissioner until we get a new man."

Chandler announced that he would still hold the Commissioner's dinner to the club owners, an annual ritual at the winter meetings, which was scheduled for later in the evening at nearby Tampa. Asked if it would be embarrassing, he said, "To who?"

Earlier in the day, Chandler had received numerous pledges of support from the nine club owners who loyally refused to go along with the project to unseat him. Among them were Clark Griffith, of the Washington club; Walter O. Briggs, of Detroit, and Tom Yawkey, of the Red Sox.

But against the weight of the opposition to Chandler in the executive meeting today, and in an apparent effort to avert any

$50,000 Territorial Rights

Bell Tells Colts They Must Pay Redskins or Get Out of League

BALTIMORE, Dec. 12 (AP).—A game of "You Can Have It, I Don't Want It" was played today with the Baltimore franchise in the National Football League.

Somebody better take it quickly or it's going to disappear, Commissioner Bert Bell warned.

Bell, declaring himself "fed up with the mess," sent down word that the "somebody" will have to pay $50,000 to George Preston Marshall, Washington Redskin owner, by January 5 "if the Colts are to remain in the league."

The $50,000 is the second payment on $150,000 Baltimore agreed to pay Marshall for his territorial rights when the Colts of the old All-America Conference were admitted to the National Football League this year.

Bell's nomination for the "somebody" is Abe Watner, who became president this year by promising to pay all Colt expenses. "He signed the agreement and it is his obligation," the commissioner said.

Watner and a group of businessmen, who took over the franchise three years ago, have been batting it back and forth furiously in recent weeks. Watner first demanded sole ownership for next year or he wouldn't be responsible for the estimated $80,000 loss this season.

The directors, who represent 200 stockholders, shopped around for fresh money, but couldn't find any. They planned a later meeting.

But Watner suddenly reversed his field today. Unless the directors guarantee advance season ticket sales of 12,000, he informed them, he now wants five of the directors to help him underwrite 1951 operations.

"Nobody will put in a nickel to go in with him," declared Robert Embry, a director and leading spokesman. He indicated the directors plan to go ahead with their recommendation giving the franchise to Watner.

Mottley Near Unanimous Choice

Bears, Browns Each Land 3 On UP All-Pro League Team

NEW YORK, Dec. 12 (U.P.).—The Chicago Bears and Cleveland Browns dominated the 1950 United Press National Football League All-star team announced today, each placing three members on the first team.

Smashing Fullback Marion Motley, a near-unanimous choice by the United Press writers who covered N. F. L. games throughout the season, led the Browns' delegation along with crack End Mac Speedie and Guard Bill Willis.

Quarterback Johnny Lujack, Tackle George Connor, and Guard Dick Barwegan were the Bears selected.

C. U. Trounces Bridgewater

After a slow first half, Catholic University's Cardinals opened up a scoring punch and walloped a less-experienced Bridgewater five, 85-69, last night on the C. U. court.

It was the second win of the year for C. U. against three losses. It was Bridgewater's fourth straight loss of the season.

Shortly after the start of the second quarter, Bridgewater, with Earle Fike leading the way, tied the count at 22-all. Baskets by Jim Balint and Joe Dell Ratta broke the ice, and for the rest of the contest C. U. kept well ahead. At one point in the fourth period, the score difference was 22 points.

Boston Wins, 87-81, For Crowd of 13,909

BOSTON, Dec. 12 (AP).—In a battle of division leaders, the Boston Celtics tonight rolled to an 87-81 win over the Fort Wayne Pistons before a capacity Boston Garden crowd of 13,909.

Fort Wayne broke to a fast start, scoring the first 12 points. Boston rallied behind Easy Ed MacAuley who led the scoring with 25 points

Caps Run Into MacAuley, Pesky Celtics Here Tonight

The top and bottom of the National Basketball Association's Eastern Division meet at Uline Arena tonight with Red Auerbach's first place Boston Celtics playing the last place Washington Caps. Tap off time is 8:30.

The difference between the Celtics and Caps isn't as wide as it would seem. The Celts have only a five and one-half game lead on Washington in the standings, and only a 3-2 edge in their season's series.

Oddly enough, Washington's two victories were earned in Boston, while Boston has beaten the Caps twice here. The Celtics' third victory came on a neutral court, in Providence.

Boston's chief troublemaker against Washington has been Easy Ed MacAuley, 6 foot 8 inch former St. Louis University All-America. In four of the games, MacAuley has scored 90 points.

Meanwhile, Washington is still trying to shake off its slump which has seen it lose eight out of its last 10 games.

A 7:15 preliminary tonight lists Fairfax against St. Anthony's High.—HERB HEFT

lieved to be no chance to unseat Chandler. How he aligned his forces is still a mystery, but obviously he played on prejudices against Chandler developed during the last five years when the Commissioner levied routine fines against many clubs for violations.

The anti-Chandler group struck, too, at a time when an ill-timed off-the-cuff remark by the Commissioner panicked the club owners all down the line. It was his war-scare comment to a group of newsmen which intimated that baseball might have to fold up if there was total mobilization for war.

Many a club owner blanched at that pronouncement by their Commissioner, who had given it more credence by referring to a recent visit with President Truman. He added that "baseball will have to be prepared for any emergency." With certain fence-sitting owners, committed neither to the pro or anti-Chandler forces, it might have been the clincher.

Chandler himself is not yet positive as to how the clubs were aligned for or against him, because of their pledge to secrecy in the meeting. But according to the inevitable leaks, the antis were:

New York, Chicago and St. Louis in the American League; St. Louis, Philadelphia, Boston and Pittsburgh in the National League.

IT BECAME KNOWN that Detroit's representative, General Manager Billy Evans, made a rousing speech in Chandler's behalf between each balloting. It fell on deaf ears as the anti-Chandler group merely continued without comment to ask for the votes.

"It would not have happened if Mr. Griffith had been here," declared Vice President Calvin Griffith of the Washington club, who had cast a solid vote for Chandler on instructions from President Clark Griffith, ill at his home. "I guarantee Mr. Griffith would have made a speech that would have shamed them."

To Chandler, the shocker was the opposition of the Pittsburgh club. He confidently assumed that President John Galbreath was in his corner, but he recognized in the Pirates' new general manager, Branch Rickey, an anti-Chandler man. Chandler's friends feel now that Rickey swayed Galbreath's vote.

Chandler held the friendship also of the late Robert Carpenter, sr., owner of the Phillies, but President Robert Carpenter, jr., voted against him. Asked about that, Chandler said bitingly, "Young Bob is not to be confused with his father."

THE WRATH OF THE Braves was incurred by Chandler last summer, he assumes, when he refused to permit them to stage a footrace between their fleet colored outfielder, Sam Jethroe, and Barney Ewell, former college sprint star. "Ball parks are for baseball, not side-shows," said Chandler at that time.

He had expected opposition from the Yankees who waxed indignant last summer when Chandler canceled their deal that sent Dick Wakefield to the White Sox. He had piqued the Yankees also with moderate fines for several other infractions, including signing schoolboy stars.

There was no ready explanation for the opposition of the White Sox and the Browns who were labeled by Chandler's friends simply as "a couple of teams that went along with the ring leaders."

First suspicions that the New York Giants had voted against Chandler were completely allayed when it developed that President Horace Stoneham, true to his pre-meeting pledgge, backed Chandler 100 percent, even to the point of making a loud plea that the owners defeat the motion to reject him.

THE ENEMIES OF Chandler were striking, too, at a time when over-all attendance in the majors had dropped 13.2 percent from last year, and there were rumbles from the minors over the invasion of their territory by radio and telecasts. It was Chandler, who in an attempt to appease the Department of Justice, which demanded wider distribution of games on the airways, had approved the demand.

Chandler's friends, attributing the result of the voting to "the small action of small men," declared the Commissioner had knowingly risked their dislike by doing his duty as he saw it. "Every fine he levied rubbed them the wrong way," they declared. "They were small things, but they built up prejudice against the Commissioner."

They pointed out that Chandler might have been less public-minded and more owner-minded in some of his statements but had pictured his job as a duty to the Nation as well as to the baseball owners.

When he was reminded that the club owners might not take kindly to his intimation that baseball might have to fold if total mobilization occurred, Chandler's reaction was typical. Standing on the porch of his St. Petersburg hotel last week, he pointed to the street and declared grandly:

"I also have to square myself and baseball with the people out there."

Unfortunately for Chandler, his friends, the people out there, did not have any votes today.

Chandler Refuses to Resign, Successor Sought Anyway

wide rift in policies, the pro-Chandler group joined the antis in the unanimous action.

The identity of a successor to Chandler was not taken up at the meeting at which his ouster was confirmed, said Topping. "That will come later," the Yankee president added.

The names of Gen. Dwight Eisenhower, Supreme Court Justice Vinson, and National League President Ford Frick have early been mentioned unofficially as likely successors to the commissionership.

There was an admission by some owners that they were ignorant of the procedure whereby they might buy up the remaining 16 months of Chandler's contract. "We'll need legal advice about that," it was said. "The constitution calls for the Commissioner's term to run for seven years."

The action today was interpreted as a virtual impeachment of Chandler, who succeeded the late Kenesaw M. Landis as Commissioner in May of 1945. Read into it was a clear-cut invitation to him to resign, at least.

Chandler's declaration that he would not quit was a reiteration of his stand the night before after he first was told of his rejection for a new term.

Chandler's appearance before the owners today was apparently a last-ditch attempt to save his job, but faced with a 16-0 vote against him. It is presumed that he is out of the baseball picture whenever his successor is named.

For the anti-Chandler forces it was an affirmation of their triumph of the night before when St. Louis Cardinal Owner Fred Saigh, and Yankee Co-Owner Del Webb were the ringleaders in the fast-crystallizing move to get a new commissioner.

Wilkinson AP Coach of Year

NEW YORK, Dec. 12 (AP).—Boyish Bud Wilkinson not only led his Oklahoma football team to the national championship this year but turned in the season's best coaching job in doing it.

That's the opinion of sports writers and broadcasters, participating in the Associated Press year-end poll.

Wilkinson won out for top coaching honors in a close race with Charley Caldwell of Princeton and Lynn (Pappy) Waldorf, from California. Wilkinson had 48, Caldwell 30 and Waldorf 26.

Paul (Bear) Bryant of Kentucky received 18 votes and Ivy Williamson of Wisconsin drew down 12.

Snead Earns $35,000 in '50 for Record

CHICAGO, Dec. 12 (AP).—Sam Snead ran his 1950 golf winnings to an official $35,758.83 — the most swag ever bagged by a golf pro in one season.

The balding, 36-year-old Virginian climaxed his campaign by averaging 69.23 strokes through 96 rounds to win the Vardon Trophy.

For the second successive year and for the third time since 1938, the short-spoken golfing genius pulled a "double" by heading the financial list and capturing the Vardon Trophy.

8 Cash In 9 Tickets on 9-8 Combine

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

CHARLES TOWN, Dec. 12.—Nine tickets were redeemed by eight customers on a $1241 daily double as racing was resumed at this point today.

The big pay-off came on the 9 and 8 combination of Jubilant, owned by H. M. Simpson, of Washington, winner of the first race, and Mrs. E. G. Hullcoat's Flaming Acres, winner of the second.

Jubilant put the big monetary punch in the double by taking the opening event by a mere head margin in a three-way shot to bring her backers an individual across-the-board return of $193.20, $48.20 and $13.20. He was the longest shot in the field.

Flaming Acres, also won by a head. Under a good ride by Apprentice Anthony Russo. The 4-year-old paid $8.40 straight as third choice in the group of nine and whipped the favorite, J. F. Miller's McLish.

The plant was teeming with budding success stories after Jubilant's surprise victory. The possible daily double payoffs ranged from $457.20 on McLish to $4,343.60 on Corner Star.

A Hagerstown man, who refused to identify himself, held two tickets and said that he had wheeled (taken all combinations) Flaming Acres twice to get the jack pot.

A woman who rode the train cashed another and also insisted on remaining anonymous. She explained her investment was strictly a hunch. "Take the two sires," she said. "Jubilant is by Boston Man and there's nine letters in the name. Flaming Acres is by Airflame and there's eight letters in the name. There's your combination—9 and 8."

Renard's Free Toss Wins for Devitt, 54-53

A foul shot in the last three seconds by Bud Renard gave unbeaten Devitt Prep its third successive victory yesterday, a 54-53 decision at Maryland Park.

After losing an early lead, Devitt rallied in the fourth period for its exciting triumph. Bob McCauley, scoring runnerup for the winners, dropped a hook shot to tie the score with his sixteenth point. Bill (Lefty) Roe was high with 20.

Dick Esleeck Fired as Coach At Richmond

RICHMOND, Va., Dec. 12 (AP).—The University of Richmond Athletic Council announced today that Karl A. (Dick) Esleeck would be replaced as head football coach next year.

Dr. James T. Tucker, chairman of the council, said it had been decided that Esleeck would not be tendered another contract after the present agreement expires December 1.

The move climaxed widespread reports that Esleeck would either quit or be replaced. The Spiders won only 2 of 10 games during the recent gridiron campaign.

There have been reports Esleeck's most likely successor is Edwin Joel Merrick, head coach at Fork Union Military Academy. Merrick is a native of Pottsville, Pa.

Bill Bennings

At Charles Town

Darrell Hartley, leading apprentice at Bowie, showed his saddle skill with Dave Robertson's Triple F in the fourth race. He brought the 3-year-old from far back, had to weave between horses and was a going away winner despite the gelding's attempts to lug in. Triple F, by the way, is aptly named, taking his moniker from the initials of his breeding, by Fenelon-Fond Friend. I'm serving notice on you race fans. I'm going to be on the switchboard at Metropolitan 6262 Thursday morning. Here's your chance to play a sure winner—the Community Chest. Phone in your contribution and I'm not adverse to taking two-buck notes, either. See you on the rail at Charles Town Thursday and hear you on the phone at Washington Thursday.—BILL.

Basketball Controversy—Skill vs. Score!

Are the skill and finesse of basketball being sacrificed in an attempt to roll up high scores?

Mel Allen, one of the nation's leading sportscasters, discusses today's game and tells why it has become the nation's highest scoring sport in "Has Basketball Gone Haywire?"

Cigarette Tax Repeal Voted in Alexandria

Alexandria's City Council agreed last night to discard the city's 2-cent-per-pack cigarette tax adopted last June as an emergency measure.

On motion of Councilman Marshall J. Beverley, the council unanimously adopted an ordinance to cancel the tax and to redeem tax stamps unused at the time the repealer becomes effective.

The ordinance cannot become final until it is submitted for a second reading, slated for December 26. Repeal of the tax will become effective 30 days thereafter.

The cigarette tax originally was included in a tentative budget and was slated to yield $150,000 in 1951. The proposal, however, brought numerous protests from merchants, who contended that the levy not only hurt cigarette sales, but was driving other forms of business out of the city.

The repealer was approved without discussion, City Manager W. Guy Ancell having previously recommended to the council that the tax be dropped.

The council also approved a resolution calling for greater representation for both Virginia and Maryland on a proposed new National Capital Planning Commission.

The resolution was identical to one approved 10 days ago by the Northern Virginia Regional Planning Commission.

It asks both States have representatives from each local governing body and each regional planning commission in the National Capital area. In effect it would give Virginia five delegates and provide three from Maryland.

A bill now pending before Congress to create the new commission gives each State only one voice in the proposed seven-member commission.

In another resolution adopted unanimously, the council asked that three Government-owned housing projects be turned over to the Alexandria housing authority for rental to low income families.

The projects are Chinquapin Village with 300 units, Cameron Valley with 331 and Ramsay Homes with 15.

Woman's Body Found in Woods

CAMBRIDGE, Md., Dec. 12 (AP). Three Christmas holly hunters found the body of a woman in a remote, wooded section of Dorchester County today.

Sheriff Waldo Robinson said "it looks like a homicide."

The body lay in thick woods bordering River Road about 25 miles northeast of here, near the Caroline County line. The woman had been dead at least three weeks.

The body was clad in a print dress and a half-length green corduroy coat. There were no shoes or hose. The woman appeared to have been about 30 to 35 years old. She was an inch or 2 over 5 feet and weighed about 100 pounds.

Benning P-TA Meets

A Christmas program will be presented at a meeting of the Benning Elementary School Parent-Teacher Association tonight at 8 at the school, Minnesota ave. and Foote st. ne.

Scenery Lack Is Handicap To Ballet

By Paul Hume

The National Ballet, formerly known as Ballet Soiree, presented its first Constitution Hall concert last night.

The program was substantially the same as the one given last spring in the Gayety Theater. Among the chief differences last night was the use of an orchestra, and the absence of scenery.

The occasion was a benefit for the D. C. chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution. We cannot avoid hoping that these ladies, who own Washington's only concert hall of size, observed a few things.

Scenery Adds to Show

We hope they noted that the stage of Constitution Hall is not adequate for ballet, opera, or large musical presentations. We hope they missed the scenery which adds so much to such musical spectacles. Between the regulations of the DAR and the District fire department, it is not worth a company's trying to use scenery.

Perhaps, too, the ladies, some of whom remarked on the difficulty of seeing the opening ballet because of the lighting, will consider the possibility of rearranging things so that lights, scenery, and other things that would help so much, can be put into their hall.

For until something concrete along these lines is done, the ladies are helping to contradict that statement included in the evening's programs by the Hon. Barratt O'Hara of Illinois.

Important to the Nation

Congressman O'Hara says, in the Congressional Record of June 15, 1950, "The importance to the Nation of the Capital City of Washington as the source of cultural inspiration as well as a shrine of patriotism is fully appreciated by all of us."

That statement is sadly overoptimistic as you can find out by a quick survey of our cultural assets, when it comes to a proper setting for our musical life.

Enough of shortcomings.

The National Ballet looks the same as it did when it was the Ballet Soiree. The same dancers are still doing the same dances, in the same way.

Some of that way is good. Some, most in fact, is so stereotyped and routine that these young dancers who need experience and training cannot get it by repeating such repertoire.

They Show Promise

There are those in the company who have possibilities as dancers. Betty Wright, George Surmick, Venita Louise, Walter Stroud—all show promise. But their work is a mixture of promise and moments still raw with amateurism.

The corps as a whole lacks real discipline. They do not walk properly and seem unable to manage their arms in anything but the most tired manner.

The secret of a fine ballet company is in its discipline, and in the originality of its material. When the National Ballet has acquired more than the good local honor it deserves as a school of dancing, it will more fully merit its new name.

4 Former County Realty Chiefs to Be Feted at Party

Four past presidents of the Prince Georges County Real Estate Board will receive plaques for their services at the board's fourth annual banquet tonight at 8 o'clock at Prince Georges Golf and Country Club.

New Republican county officials, elected in the November elections, and the former Democratic officeholders, have been invited to attend.

T. Howard Duckett, president of the Prince Georges Bank Trust Co. and longtime Democratic Party leader, will be inducted as an honorary member of the real estate group.

Presidents to be honored are Robert M. Watkins, T. Raymond Burch, Dewey Freeman and Thomas Halley. Halley, the incumbent, goes out of office after the banquet. He will be succeeded by Harry A. Boswell, jr.

Conant Is Elected As New Chairman Of Science Board

Dr. James B. Conant, president of Harvard University, was elected chairman of the National Science Board of the National Science Foundation yesterday at a White House meeting.

Other officers elected by the 24-man board were Edwin B. Fred, president of the University of Wisconsin, as vice chairman, and these members of the executive committee:

Chester I. Barnard, president of the Rockefeller Foundation; Detluv Wulf Brunk, president of Johns Hopkins University; Leo A. Dubridge, president of the California Institute of Technology; Dr. Paul M. Gross, dean of the Duke University graduate school; Robert F. Loeb, Bard professor of medical services, College of Physicians and Surgeons, Columbia University; Joseph C. Morris, vice president of Tulane University; Edwin C. Stackman, chief of the division of plant pathology and botany, University of Minnesota, and Conant and Fred.

The board, governing body of the National Science Foundation, will meet again January 3 to consider and recommend a foundation director, a post for which Sen. Frank P. Graham, former president of the University of North Carolina, has been prominently mentioned. President Truman will make the appointment after the January meeting.

Citizens Back Proposed TV Education Plan

The Lamond Heights Citizens Association voted last night to support the Federatioon of Citizens Associations in recommending that television frequencies be set aside for educational purposes.

In other action at the meeting in the Masonic and Eastern Star Home, 6000 New Hampshire ave. ne., the group asked for reconsideration of a National Production Authority order banning construction of recreation facilities.

Max E. Schwartz, chief warden of the District civilian defense organization, spoke at the meeting.

Erie Heights

The Erie Heights Civic Association last night asked for amendment of the National Production Authority ban on construction of amusement facilities to permit limited construction of nonprofit recreation facilities.

The association, meeting at Our Lady of Perpetual Help Church, expressed its belief that recreation is essential to civilian morale.

The group also voted to distribute Christmas baskets to needy members of the community. The community Christmas tree will be lighted at 8 p. m., December 24 in front of 1729 Erie st. se., it was announced.

Arkansas Avenue

The Arkansas Avenue Comunity Citizens Association devoted its monthly meeting in Burdick Vocational School last night to the annual Christmas party.

About 150 persons partook of refreshments and watched an entertainment program featuring the Burdick Girls' Glee Club and dancers from the Madeleine Smithson Hodgson dancing school.

Thomas Circle

The Thomas Circle Citizens Association last night indorsed a proposal to eliminate the sales tax on meals served in District restaurants.

Meeting at 1536 16th st. nw., the group asked Capital Transit for bus service in the District and voted to invite a civilian defense official to speak at the January meeting on how one should protect oneself during atomic attack.

Leaders Laud Library of Congress

The Library of Congress was honored last night as "a great American institution" by representatives of libraries and learned and scientific bodies of the United States.

More than 150 representatives of such groups from all parts of the country and Canada gathered for dinner at the Mayflower Hotel to observe the 150th anniversary of the founding of the library.

Milton E. Lord of Boston, retiring president of the American Library Association, told the meeting that librarians have long know that "the Library of Congress stands at the summit of the American library system."

"It has been most happy for us to see how the Government of the United States has recognized it," he added.

Dr. Robert B. Downs, director of the University of Illinois library, speaking for the libraries of the United States, said, "By European standards, 150 years would represent the beardless youth stage. For us it represents the whole growth of a Nation."

Another tribute came from Dr. Charles E. Odegaard of Washington, executive director of the American Council of Learned Societies. He said that scholars and scientists know that the library, "their great friend, is often anticipatory of their needs."

Representative Carl Albert (D., Okla.), member of the Joint Committee on the Library, and former Rhodes scholar, speaking for the Congress, described the library as not only "one of the great research centers of the United States, but one of the national shrines, as well known as Mount Vernon and Gettysburg."

Replying in behalf of the library, Librarian Luther H. Evans said "We who are there today feel very deeply that we are carrying a torch that was lighted a long time ago."

Among guests present were Herbert Putnam, librarian emeritus, and Dr. William S. Wallace, president of the Canadian Library Association.

DDT-Polio Link Seen at Hearing On Chemicals' Use

By The Associated Press

The possibility that use of the bug killer DDT might have some relation to outbreaks of polio was raised today before a special Congressional food investigating committee.

This House committee, headed by Representative Delaney (D., N. Y.), is inquiring into the effects on human health of chemical fertilizers, insecticides, and use of chemicals in food.

The purpose is to see whether the Food and Drug Act should be amended to give it expanded authority to control the use of chemicals when food might be affected.

Dr. Morton S. Biskind of Westport, Conn., research specialist, told the committee he believed that the use of the chlorinated cyclic hydrocarbons—which include DDT—on crops and in food establishments should be prohibited by law "if we want to survive."

He said evidence gathered by Dr. Robert F. Mobbs of North Carolina indicates that whenever DDT had been used against polio, not only was there an epidemic of symptoms of DDT poisoning "but the incidence of polio continued to rise and in fact appeared where it had not been before."

ACREAGE, SALE 75

MARYLAND

500 ACRES—100 acres already sold for development. This acreage is located 4 squares over the District line in the zone of the new South Capitol St. Bridge. This bridge is now operating with a capacity of 50,000 automobiles a day. There is no reason why the property over here is not as valuable here as the 3 bridges on the Virginia end where the bridges end in Virginia. Property there is worth from one to two million dollars an acre and that is the future of these 500 acres. We have also a 3-acre cemetery to be made larger, and under the Maryland law you cannot get a permit for any more cemeteries; but if you have already got a cemetery you can go ahead and develop it. Cemeteries, when they are completed, are selling at $100,000 an acre. Barnaby blvd. has just been widened and regraded by the State of Maryland, and a number of shopping centers are promising to open up. We would sell this Barnaby front at a special price property not less than 80c a sq. ft. for a large portion of it. This should be the greatest shopping center around Washington. When I built the town of Chevy Chase, D. C. where the theater is located in Chevy Chase, that ground I sold for 32c a sq. ft. is now worth 2 million dollars an acre in the shopping center, and when I sold it for 32c, people said I was charging too much for it. I bought that ground from Mr. Charles C. Glover, the deceased president of the Riggs National Bank, and he sold for $50 an acre before Conn. ave. was ever opened up. That will help you understand what this property in Southeast will be worth. Sears and Roebuck, one of the largest department stores in the world, has bought a large tract over here and are going to open a big department store there. Other department stores are moving out in Maryland and Virginia. Kann's, Woodward & Lothrop and the Hecht Co. are speculating to open branches out this way. You can reach me at my home, OL. 4408. FULTON R. GORDON, Owner. Brokers' attention.

County Council Studies Action To Meet Higher School Costs

Increasing construction costs for three Montgomery County school projects yesterday forced the Board of Education into a meeting with the County Council in an effort to find a solution.

Bids on the construction of the proposed addition to the East Rockville Elementary School, the Viers Mill Village Elementary School addition, and the proposed new gymnasium for the Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School all were more than ten percent above the allotted funds.

The board asked the council to issue "letters of intent" to appropriate the necessary additional funds in the next budget so that the contractors could begin work on the needed projects. The council has the request under consideration.

The board attended a luncheon at the Montgomery Junior College and then inspected remodeling work at the school. The meeting was held at the junior college.

Wrong Territory

HOERSTEIN, Germany, Dec. 12 (U.P.).—Four American soldiers entered a German inn here and offered to take on all comers. Four Germans tossed the soldiers into the street—from a meeting of the Hoerstein Wrestling Club.

SITTINGBOURNE, England, Dec. 12 (U.P.).A judge shook his head and said "no" to a man who applied for a temporary license to sell alcoholic drinks at the anniversary celebration of the Temperance Club.

2d Hanging Sentence Passed On Edwards in Double Slaying

BALTIMORE, Dec. 12 (AP). Thomas A. Edwards, 26, of Anne Arundel County, today was sentenced to death for a second time for a double murder—and again his case will go to the Maryland Court of Appeals.

This time the high court, because it is operating under new rules, may be able to give a clearer-cut decision.

Edwards' second death sentence was pronounced in Baltimore Criminal Court. He had sought a third trial after he was again convicted of first degree murder in the slayings more than two years ago of John Mahlan and Mary Kline. They were shot to death while on a date in September, 1948.

The Baltimore Supreme Bench last week turned down Edwards' bid for a new trial and today's sentencing was the result.

Edwards' first conviction, in 1949, was upset by the Court of Appeals, which found that the police had improperly obtained an alleged confession introduced at the trial.

A second trial resulted in another verdict of guilty. This was last June.

Now his attorneys will again go to Maryland's Court of Appeals to seek a new trial.

Under new rules, the high court has more latitude in considering evidence. Before this year, the court could only rule on judicial questions—whether a piece of evidence could be officially brought into the trial. Now, the court may make a complete review of the evidence, including its weight and sufficiency.

Press Curb Charged

BUENOS AIRES, Dec. 12 (U.P.).—independent newspaper La Prensa said today that freedom of the press is being curtailed in Argentina by continued enforcement of a month-old official "emergency" order cutting newsprint consumption by 20 percent. The government has refused to allot dollar exchange for newsprint purchases.

Prison Death Case Closed

RICHMOND, Va., Dec. 12 (AP).—Governor Battle today found that Vincent Hubbard, a prisoner who died of burns at the State Penitentiary last Saturday, received "prompt and continuous" attention and care at the hands of penal and medical officials.

He so informed Howard H. Carwile, attorney for the dead man's mother, Mrs. Nina Hubbard, who had asked for an investigation of the 33-year-old Richmonder's death.

Battle wrote Carwile late today that a "thorough investigation" had been made by officials of the State Department of Welfare and Institutions.

In reply to Mrs. Hubbard's complaint that the prisoner's family was not notified of his serious condition until Saturday, after Hubbard had been burned Thursday night, the Governor wrote:

"The prisoner was seen at various times between the time of his admission to the hospital and his death . . . They (the doctors) report the man received every attention possible. There was no indication until Saturday morning, Demecber 9, that Hubbard was in a serious condition."

Governor Battle also noted that prison authorities reported other inmates had seen Hubbard smoking (his mother said he had stopped) and had concluded from the evidence that Hubbard had fallen asleep while smoking in bed. Battle added that "all the evidence supported this conclusion."

Regarding the barbiturates which were found in Hubbard's cell and traces of which were found in his body, the Governor said the tablets "are not of the type or potency considered to be dangerous . . ."

Chicago Racket Figure Asks Contempt Charge Dismissal

Harry Russell, 59, yesterday petitioned District Court to dismiss the indictment charging him with 60 counts of contempt of Congress.

Russell, a Chicago racket figure, was charged with refusing to answer questions of the Kefauver Crime Investigation Committee concerning his alleged association with a Miami gambling syndicate.

Through his attorney, William H. Collins, Russell said the committee was set up with such ill-defined power that it was impossible to determine whether the questions were pertinent to the inquiry.

He also declared that his refusal to answer was based on the Constitutional protection against self-incrimination. He said his answers might have made him subject to prosecution for gambling conspiracy or tax evasion.

Rome Cash Bid Forecast

ROME, Dec. 12 (AP).—A source close to the government predicted tonight that Italy will ask the United States soon for several hundred million dollars to strengthen this country's contribution to an Atlantic pact defense force.

Miller Assails Senator Byrd

RICHMOND, Va., Dec. 12 (AP).—Francis Pickens Miller said here tonight that "appeals to passion and prejudice" have come to overshadow truth and reason in Virginia politics.

The man most responsible for "this flight from reason," he said, is Sen. Harry F. Byrd (D., Va.).

In an address before the Lee Ward Democratic Club, Miller charged that Byrd "is in this respect one of the most authentic demagogues in the country."

Byrd is "all the more dangerous because of the facade of aristocratic respectability behind which he operates," Miller said.

Baldridge Is Confirmed

The Senate yesterday confirmed the nomination of Holmes Baldridge of Oklahoma to be an assistant attorney general.

Court Wives Dine at Blair House

By Marie McNair

MRS. TRUMAN entertained at luncheon yesterday at Blair House in honor of the wives of the Justices of the Supreme Court. Only six of the group, which numbers nine, were present. Mrs. Fred Vinson, wife of the Chief Justice, has canceled all of her social engagements owing to the recent death of her mother, Mrs. Robert Dixon. Mrs. Felix Frankfurter left town Monday with the Justice to keep an engagement of long standing and Mrs. Hugo Black is in New York.

Present were Mrs. William O. Douglas, Mrs. Robert H. Jackson, Mrs. Harold Burton, Mrs. Tom Clark and Mrs. Sherman Minton.

Others seated around the luncheon table decked with yellow roses, white snapdragon and blue iris were: Lady Franks, wife of the British Ambassador; Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, Mrs. Robert Lovett, wife of the Deputy Secretary of Defense; Mrs. Vincent Burke, wife of the Deputy Postmaster General; Mrs. Clarence J. McCormick, wife of the Undersecretary of Agriculture; Mrs. Michael J. Galvin, wife of the Undersecretary of Labor.

Mrs. W. Averell Harriman, wife of the Special Assistant to President Truman, was a guest and also Mrs. Anna Rosenberg, newly named Assistant Secretary of Defense; Mrs. James L. Houghteling, Mrs. Fred W. Morrison, president of the Women's National Democratic Club, and Mrs. Lisle Smith of Vienna, Va.

MISS BARBARA CRANSTON will be a Christmas week debutante. She is the daughter of Brig. Gen. Joseph A. Cranston, USA (retired) and Mrs. Cranston. She will be presented to society at a tea dance December 23 at the Officers Club, Fort McNair. Miss Cranston is the granddaughter of Mrs. William Eugene Elliott and the late Mr. Elliott and of the late Moncure Burke

AT WHITE HOUSE social secretary, Mrs. James Helm's press conference yesterday, she answered "I don't know" to the query, is Margaret Truman retiring from the concert stage as the result of the recent unfavorable criticism on her Washington appearance at Constitution Hall.

Mrs. Helm also didn't know when Miss Truman would join her mother, and grandmother, Mrs. David Wallace, in Independence. The First Lady and her mother will leave the end of the week for the Missouri family home to remain until after the New Year. What the Truman family will eat for Christmas Day dinner will probably be the usual holiday fare, Mrs. Helm said.

If there is to be a White House Christmas party for employes this year, Mrs. Helm hasn't heard of it. At any rate she hasn't been invited she said, and injecting a light note in the gathering, added: "I'm hurt."

PARTY PARADE:

THE DEAN of the Diplomatic Corps, Norwegian Ambassador Wilhelm Munthe Morgenstierne, and Mme. Munthe Morgenstierne, were the guests in whose honor the French Ambassador and Mme. Bonnet entertained at dinner at the embassy last evening.

Mrs. Wallace White, wife of the former majority leader of the Senate, who is in town from her home in Maine for a brief stay, was the guest of honor at a luncheon yesterday at the Sulgrave Club given by Mrs. Hope Ridings Miller.

Mrs. John Murdock, wife of Representative Murdock, who is the author of a biography of Brumidi, muralist for the Capitol, was among the guests. Others were Mrs. George Malone, Mrs. Joshua Evans, Mrs. Randall Hagner, Mrs. Emil Hurja, Mrs. Edward Treglown, Mrs. Ruth Butcher and Mrs. Bulkley Griffin.

Mrs. Ernest Humphrey Daniel entertained at luncheon yesterday in the Mayflower Lounge for Mrs. Hiram Cole Houghton, president of the General Federation of Women's Club. Also in the company were Mrs. Merritt, Mrs. Gertrude Parks and Mrs. Hollis Imes.

Col. Chaim Herzog, Military, Naval and Air Attache of the Israel Embassy, and Mrs. Herzog gave a cocktail party Monday afternoon at their home in Arlington, Va.

Among those there were Maj. Gen. Stephen N. Shoosmith, Deputy Commander, British Joint Services Mission, and Mrs. Shoosmith; Brig. Gen. and Mrs. A. Robert Ginsburgh, the Military Attache of the Canadian Embassy, Brigadier H. E. Taber and Mrs. Taber; the Military and Air Attache of the Iran Embassy and Mme. Guilanshah; the Military Attache of the Norwegian Embassy, Col. Sverre Refsum.

FAREWELL DEPT.:

YESTERDAY was a day for farewells.

Lieut. Gen. Lauris Norstad, newly appointed commander in chief of the United States Air Force in Europe, and Mrs. Norstad, who have been in a flurry of farewells, anticipating their January departure, gave the first of two parties yesterday in their quarters at Fort Myer.

The 90 or more guests, from Air, Army and Navy circles, were welcomed by the general and by Mrs. Norstad, who wore a black frock, full taffeta skirt and off-shoulder velvet top. General Norstad will leave Sunday for a quick trip to Europe, returning next Thursday.

COL. MAX WAIBEL, Military Air Attache of the Swiss Legation, said his adieux in the happiest sort of way yesterday at a cocktail party given by the Swiss Minister and Mme. Bruggmann.

He will leave today for New York, and from there Sunday by Swiss-Air for Switzerland. His new post will be commander of the Swiss Military School.

Pianist to Present Early Italian Music

ELIO GIANTURCO, Italian pianist, one of the few artists to revive ancient Italian music, will give a concert this evening at the International Student House on R st. His program will include the works of Giovanni Gabrieli, Annibale Padovano, Luzzasco Luzzaschi, Simone Molinaro, et al.

According to Mr. Gianturco the composers of those early eras were no less great than the painters, Titian, Plama il Vecchio or Giorgione. The lute composers of the sixteenth century have been discovered only in our times.

Luncheon to Benefit Hospital

Mme. Bonnet, wife of the French Ambassador, and Lady Berendsen, wife of the New Zealand Ambassador, two of Washington's most popular diplomatic hostesses, have been appointed to serve on the Honorary Committee which is planning a gala fashion show luncheon for the benefit of Providence Hospital on January 23.

The luncheon, which will be held in the Grand Ball Room of the Mayflower Hotel, will feature an exciting collection of Christian Dior original designs through the courtesy of Julius Garfinckle & Co. Proceeds from the sale of tickets will be earmarked for the Nursery Fund of the proposed new hospital biulind.

Other ladies devoting their time to the luncheon are: Mrs. William J. Collins, President of the Women's Board of Providence Hospital; Mrs. James M. Fadeley, Chairman of the Fashion Show Committee; Mrs. Howard Mitchell, Mrs. Laurence Wood Robert, jr., and Mrs. Leonard A. Sheele, members of the Honorary Committee.

Draperies Can Be Problem In Room Where Windows Are of Various Dimensions

DEAR ANNE:

I have draw draperies for the picture window in my living room. These draperies are much too long. About 12 inches rest on the floor. Will you kindly tell me what length they should be from the floor?

If I cut off these draperies, I want to make curtains for two small windows on each side of the fire place. The windows measure 26 inches in length by 24 inches width. What type curtain would you suggest? L. O. M., Oakley, Md.

Does the picture window reach to the floor? If so, cut and hem the draperies so that they just clear the floor. If the window starts a foot or two above the floor, you could have the draperies reach just to the window sill. This would give you more material to use on your small windows.

If you gain enough material to make full-length draperies at the small windows, you could either have them on a traverse rod (to be opened and closed at will) or simply hanging in soft folds at either side of the window.

However, if you wind up with only about 10 or 12 inches of material, you could use it to make a gathered valance about 6 inches in depth at the top of each window. The rest of the window could be uncurtained or have sheer white glass curtains.

Another—and more involved idea—would be to have shaped cornices made of wood to frame the small windows all around. These cornices could then be covered with the drapery material.

TO E. W.: You do not mention the type of heat used in your building. If you'll let me know, perhaps I can make some suggestions.

DEAR ANNE:

I know you want no more information on enchiladas, but I do want to tell you that Erna Fergusson's "Mexican Cookery," mentioned by Mrs. L. A. J., is now published by the University of New Mexico Press, at Albuquerque, N. Mex. It has gone into a number of editions because of the factors Mrs. L. A. J. mentions. It is simple to follow and recipes are easy to make. I should also like to tell Mrs. L. A. J. that the Fergusson recipe for sopaipillas (pronounced approximately "so-pi-pee-yas") is in "Mexican Cookery" and is easy to follow.

Irene Fisher, 1515 33d st. nw.

DEAR ANNE:

How can I remove stains from a stainless steel sink and kitchen counter?

Mrs. R. E. N., Arlington.

By stains, I take it you mean the film that sometimes forms on the surface of stainless steel and is difficult to remove with soap and water. This will yield to a mild scouring powder applied with a soft damp cloth. Mild scouring powder may also be used to bring out a brighter luster after washing with soap and water.

DEAR ANNE:

I have just finished moving. In packing, I put a can and spray of insecticide in the same box with a few plates, not knowing any better. The plates all have the odor of the insecticide now. Is it poisonous? How can I remove it?

A Reader, Washington.

Not knowing the type of insecticide, I cannot say for sure about its poisonous qualities. However, most such insecticides are not poisonous to man. At any rate, if you wash the plates very thoroughly with hot soapy water you should remove all the insecticide. An additional airing may be required to get rid of the odor.

Clip this recipe for Mrs. L. E. Barnhardt's Christmas Lace Cookies

★ 1 cup melted butter or margarine
★ 2 cups quick oatmeal
★ 3 cups firmly packed Franklin Old Fashioned Brown Sugar
★ ½ teaspoon vanilla extract

Combine butter or margarine; quick oats; brown sugar and vanilla extract; mix well. Drop mixture by ½ teaspoon on greased baking sheet 2 inches apart. Bake in moderate oven, 325°F., 10 minutes, or until cookies look lacy. Cool slightly; remove from baking sheet. Yields about 150 small cookies. Friends have begged for this recipe for the Christmas Lace Cookies Mrs. Leslie E. Barnhardt serves at her home in Charlotte, N. C. Yes; You and the Community Chest Are Santa Claus

MRS. EVELYN HAYES
... answering Chest calls

By Evelyn Hayes

"MAY I TALK to Santa Claus, please?" piped a small voice yesterday when we answered the ring of ME. 6262 at the Community Chest Emergency Pledge Headquarters. "I saw his picture in the paper yesterday," continued the little girl, "and I want to talk to him!"

This child misunderstood a cartoon in Sunday's paper, but in essence she does understand the Community Chest. To thousands upon thousands (yes, 200,000!) of Washington's needy, the Community Chest IS Santa Claus! And the warm-hearted people who have been calling ME. 6262 these past three days have been playing Santa Claus in the best possible way.

Mrs. W. P. G. of Silver Spring said: "I live way out in the woods—and I guess nobody could find me—but I want to give. And I was glad to read in The Post that I could call here." Within an hour we had dispatched somebody to get her contribution. No place is "in the woods" as far as the Chest's volunteers are concerned. They're glad to call anywhere. Mrs. M. W. of Webster st. nw., heard about the emergency drive through television. "We haven't very much ourselves," she said haltingly, "but we like to give a little to help others." Another kind lady read about the drive in "Ask Anne" and decided that the check she'd been meaning to send was needed right away—and, furthermore, she'd added a "little extra for Christmas." Mrs. C. M. G. and her husband, who had already given generously, called to say "We thought we'd like to do a little more this year at Christmas because the Chest needs it so badly."

THE CHILDREN who called were very special. An 11-year-old at Jackson School called. "I'm at recess," he said breathlessly. "I want to pledge $1—but don't send for it—I don't have it here." We agreed to let his mother honor his obligation via check. Perhaps our favorite caller was 10-year-old Robert Geral, 1713 P st. ne. "Is this where I get my extra Christmas gift?" he asked. "The Weather Bureau told me to call here." (He misunderstood the Weather Bureau's taped suggestion that people call ME. 6262 to give extra Christmas gifts.) When we explained that ours was the number to call to GIVE something extra, he turned right around and said, "Would you give me your name and number, please, ma'am? I'd like to look around and see if I can find some old toys some other kid might like." What IS the spirit of Christmas—and the Community Chest—if not this yearning to help others whose need is greater than yours.

A wonderful spirit of wanting to help pervades the entire Emergency Pledge Headquarters. There are the telephone operators who serve. Long Distance Operators Christine Anderson and Elizabeth Loveridge had come directly from a 10-to-6 night shift to do an extra telephone stint for the Community Chest.

Then there's the cozy lounge corner set up by Sears, Roebuck & Co. for the many telephone operators who come there after long shifts. And there are heart-warming surprises such as Bassin's refusing to take money for coffee and buns ordered. "We're glad to do that little extra for the Community Chest."

ME. 6262 is the number. And right NOW is the time to call. Paul Hume, The Washington Post's music critic, is at the phone this morning to accept your Community Chest pledge.

Rev. Davies Sees Chest As Antidote For Evil

"The dark portents in the world at large makes it all the more necessary that we maintain at home the full effectiveness of our community life and services.

"Where so much is evil, let us create all the good we can. We can help in this enormously by generous support of our Community Chest."

—The Rev. A. Powell Davies, minister of All Souls' Unitarian Church.

The Yule Log

Christmas Stockings Won't Run

ONE OF THE PLEASANT things about the Christmas stocking is that it won't run, and it's likely to harbor anything from a 10-cent cigar to a diamond tiara, though we can't promise the latter will lurk in the toe of your sock. Here are three ideas for the sock, including a razor to give it an intriguingly heavy feeling, and some cunning soap figures to fill up the corners.

SOFT SOAP—Cute extra presents to hide in a Christmas sock are these novelty soap figures. (left) There's Elsie the Cow, anchored to a rope so she won't wriggle away, a six-shooter for the trigger-happy, a set of four teddy-bears, called "Four No Trump," for the bridge crowd, and Santa and snowmen, too. All under a dollar, at most drug and department stores.

FOR A LADY—You can't go far wrong in giving an attractive pin or broach. Ursell's in Georgetown have several in hand wrought silver, bearing such names as "Windswept," and "Second Abstraction," ranging from $5 to $15, that would also make handsome gifts.

WHISKER OFFER—Even Santa's beard would disappear after an encounter with this "vibrator" razor which winds up like a wristwatch. Users claim you can't feel it on the face, and it gives the proverbial close shave! Has massaging effect on the skin. By Stahly, $14.95 at Lewis & Thomas Saltz.

TO HANG BY THE CHIMNEY WITH CARE—Here's the sock itself (right), an extra-special one to be saved from year to year. Make it from a chart, using metallic thread in green and gold, with plain white stripe. Santa and yule tree, plus owner's intials are knit in. Yarn (about $4) and chart from the Knitting Corner, in Arlington. P.S. It holds a lot, too.

The Economy Shop, a resale shop run by the National Council of Jewish Women, D. C. Section, at 650 Park rd. nw., will open its doors to the public today from 10:30 a. m. to 5 p. m. at a "re-open house," following redecoration.

During the day a check for $1000, representing profits from the past three months' operation, will be presented by the chairman, Mrs. Mark Bensinger, and Mrs. Harry Ullman, vice chairman, to Mrs. Joseph Dessoff, president of the D. C. Section.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Wife Is Outraged by Court Order Which Requires Her Husband to Help Support His Widowed Mother; Wife Argues That Mother Neglected Him Years Ago

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My husband is one of six children, and when they were small, his mother divorced his father and after refusing any support or help, she placed two of the children—John and his younger brother—in a charitable institution. John was 10 years of age, and his brother eight, at the time. They remained in the institution for almost 10 years, while their mother lived in some man's home and helped raise his children.

Mrs. Doe, I'll call her, was well taken care of; had her own car, fur coat, etc., yet never during this time did she seek to remove the two boys from the institution and care for them herself. Many years later she married the man whose children she had raised. He died a year ago and recently Mrs. Doe went into family court and won a settlement from each of her children. The story of her life was not allowed to influence the judge's ruling; and we intend to appeal the verdict.

John and I are not in a position to pay the amount required of us. We have three children and are just meeting our own expenses. And we feel that the four children whom Mrs. Doe kept with her during her heyday should be held morally and legally responsible for her support. At present she lives with a daughter, helping with the housework and baby-sitting for her; and she never visits the homes of either of the two sons she "orphaned."

If my mother-in-law were destitute we would make sacrifices to help her, but such is not the case, as can be proved. We wonder just how the situation looks to a person with your insight; and whether or not you think we have moral or legal right to feel that the court's decision was unjust. We would appreciate an early answer, as the appeal (if any) must be filed immediately.

K. D.

DEAR K. D.: Somehow Mrs. Doe emerges from your narrative as a rather valiant gallant character in her heyday, whereas you seem meanly determined to give her the worst of it in every respect. You say she relegated two sons to a charitable institution when they were small, after divorcing their dad and refusing support money or other co-parental help from him,—as if to imply that she had heartlessly and senselessly dispersed the family.

But I doubt that she disposed of the boys so high-handedly, chiefly because it is entirely unlikely that a charitable institution would (or could) accept two children and keep them for 10 years, unless the proper authorities had indorsed the arrangement, after checking the parents' circumstances, purposes, ability to provide, etc.

Probably the truth of the matter is that John's father was a ne'er-do-well, who had no steady income and no prospects, so that Mrs. Doe didn't try to wring blood from a turnip, as the Irish say, and got the divorce after he deserted, or maybe abused her intolerably. The fact that she took four of the six children along with her to a job as housekeeper for some man, whose children also became her charges, suggests that she was a pretty staunch person then, with more enterprise than selfishness in her make-up.

As for the years immediately following, in which she acquired a car, fur coat, etc., yet made no move to take the boys with her, why not assume that her employer, though generous in some ways, just put his foot down against bringing more children into the housekeeper's quarters. One could hardly blame him, supposing he did; and although it might have been heroic of Mrs. Doe to insist on having the boys with her at all costs, still, heroics that threw her out of a job and rendered all homeless and penniless again would have been contrary to common sense,—more lunatic than expressive of real mother-love.

Jesus left us a criterion for judging the individual's moral worth. "By their fruits ye shall know them," He said of people. Thus, if Mrs. Doe's children have turned out rather well — those she kept with her, as well as the boys who got orphanage care,—then probably this was the judge's reason for concluding that she had been an average good mother, considering the circumstances that overtook her. Perhaps he wisely thinks it no crime that she did her best to enjoy life as she went along, instead of making a burnt offering of herself in the name of "motherhood," as you seem to feel she should have done.

You don't say what sum the court requires of John in the way of cash allowance to his mother, but if her support is to be divided amongst six children, it can't be much; and my advice is to pay your share with good grace, as an investment in self-respect. You would be dishonoring yourselves and giving your children cause to blush for you, if you tried to disclaim any and all responsibility for the welfare of John's mother.

Pot Holder

It is a piece of padded cloth . . . To hold a heated pot . . . But sometimes it is something more . . . And really means a lot . . . Not just because the fabric is . . . A texture soft and fine . . . Or just because of color or . . . Of beautiful design . . . Nor is the cost important in . . . The sense of value true . . . According to appearance or . . . What it is fit to do . . . But sometimes it is woven in . . . The hours that are spent . . . By friendly hands that long to say . . . Their loving sentiment . . . And then each stitch of thread or yarn . . . New Christmas Tape Is Versatile

TRY THE NEW Christmas cellophane tapes in holiday patterns to decorate your gift boxes. The designs come with holly, poinsettias, Santa Clauses, sleigh bells, Stars of Bethlehem, and little angels in a wide range of Christmas colors.

Table glasses take on a party look with strips of this tape spiralled around them. Or make a stylized Christmas tree.

Add a border of the colored tape around dime store napkins for the children's holiday party.

Make your own Christmas stationery by applying a strip of the tape along the side and on the back of the envelope.

Last year's Christmas cards make a decorative top for a box by bordering each one with red or green tape.

Spiral tape around ordinary white candles for the party table.

Tobe' Says

Borrowing the well-known verse from Ecclesiastes, "the little foxes" are here—only this time they are not spoiling anything but enhancing it.

For the single-skin fox stole or the small fox cape have come out of "another part of the fashion forest" to be one of the smartest of our "little" fur fashions.

White fox is the most dramatic of the little foxes, especially as a short stole worn with a beautiful black silk taffeta or satin theater suit.

But black fox and the new navy blue foxes are the choice of many very smart women for either daytime or evening wear.

DI-MA-VA CLUB will hold its monthly luncheon meeting at the Ambassador Hotel Colony Room, Thursday, 12:30 p. m. Luncheon will be followed by a business meeting and an entertainment program.

GEORGETOWN UNIVERSITY SCHOOL OF NURSING ALUMNAE ASSOCIATION will meet Thursday, 8 p. m., in St. Marys Lounge at the school. The Rev. Edward B. Bunn will be the guest speaker.

On the Town

By Georganne Williamson

The ever recurring night club ventures at the hole-in-the-wall at 3333 Connecticut ave. have cropped up again. This time it's made bright by the name of Billie Holiday, who opened the new club, still called the Brown Derby, last week and will remain at least the rest of this week.

Billie Holiday

Billie is an artist—as much as the top performers in any field. The handsome Negro woman's singing would be hard for any to approach, and it can't be copied. Her voice has many inflections and moods. If it were not for the smooth way she blends them, one would think there were several distinct voices.

Often it's nasal, thin—kind of a plaint. It's perhaps her most characteristic tone, and it's just plain "Billie Holliday." There's also a throaty husky tone that seems almost to ground out the blue lines she she always sings. Then there's a low, strong, well-placed voice that is a good singer.

The voice is one factor in her artistry: another is her phrasing, enunciation, and inflections. And another is her expression. For Billie Holiday puts every word across. She seems to feel each part, no matter how many times she may sing a song.

Some say this is because of her difficult life; that the queen of the blues, the one Metronome has voted "the greatest female singer of all time" has lived a life synonymous with all the things the blues sing of.

From her humble beginning, singing for tips in restaurants, she went to the top of her profession, being paid on occasion as much as $5000 a week and winning an enthusiastic cult of followers whose loyalty to her has never wavered.

But it has had its ups and downs, and probably at no point could have been called pleasant. Law suits and trouble with her manager and husband have just been a part of it.

A little more than a year ago, Billie Holiday was supposed to be "through" when she entered an institution to be cured of drug addiction. The damaging publicity and legal trouble added to the usual inertia and lack of will that often keeps addicts from being cured.

But one thing was overlooked—Billie Holiday's fans. Thousands wrote her letters again and again, encouraging her to conquer the drug habit. And when she finally came out, just 10 days later they packed Carnegie Hall to hear her. After the Carnegie engagement came a record-breaking run at the Strand Theater in New York which was followed successfully at the Ebony Club on Broadway.

So Billie Holiday is back in her niche again. Her particular, curious style of "singing the blues" remains a part of the jazz world all her own.

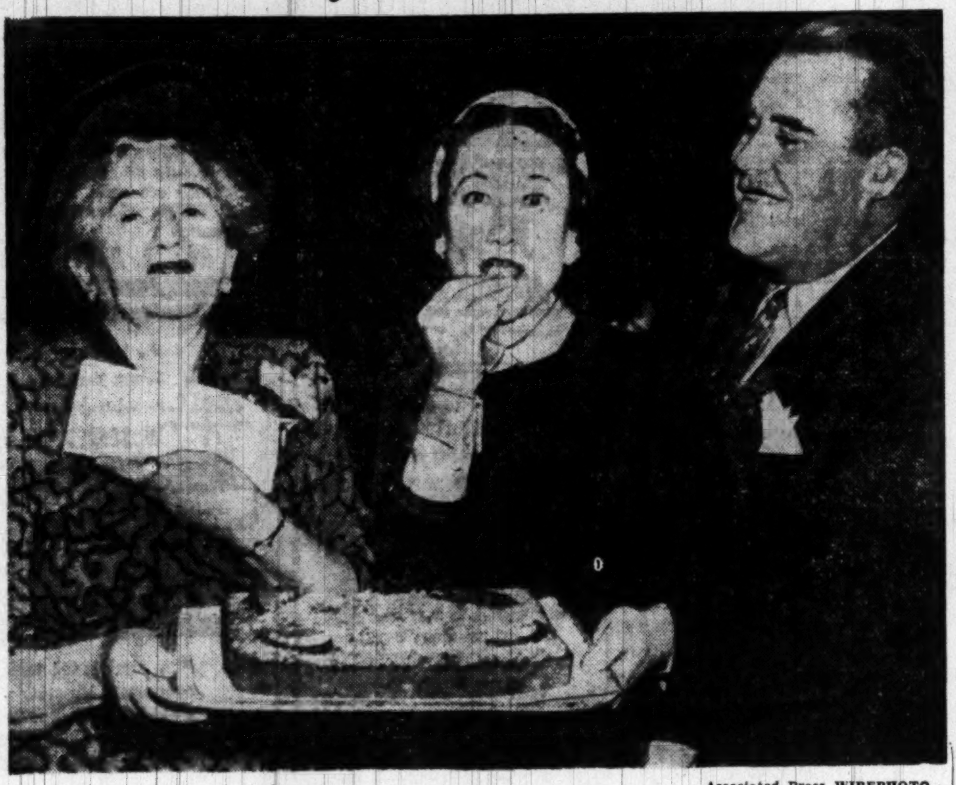
Baker's Wife Wins $25,000 in Baking Contest



Associated Press WIREPHOTO

TO A DUCHESS' TASTE!—The winning cake baked by Mrs. Peter Wuebel of Redwood City, Calif., is sampled by the Duchess of Windsor at the conclusion of the Grand National Bake-Off in New York City. Holding the cake as Mrs. Wuebel holds her check for the $25,000 prize is Philip W. Pillsbury, president of the sponsoring company

NEW YORK, Dec. 12 (AP).—A California baker's wife won $25,000 today as the first prize winner in a national baking and recipe contest.

The winner, gray-haired Mrs. Peter Wuebel of Redwood City received the award from the Duchess of Windsor at a luncheon in the Waldorf Astoria Hotel.

The contest—The Grand National Bakeoff—was sponsored by Pillsbury Mills.

An orange "Kiss-Me Cake"—a variation of a recipe she obtained in New Mexico—won the contest for Mrs. Wuebel.

The recipe was given thus:

KISS-ME CAKE

2 cups enriched flour, sifted;
1 teaspoon soda;
1 teaspoon salt;
½ cup shortening;
1 cup sugar;
2 eggs;
1 large orange (reserve juice for topping; grind rind and pulp with raisins);
1 cup raisins, ground;
1 cup milk.

Sift together flour, soda, and salt. Cream shortening and sugar. Blend in eggs, one at a time. Add ground orange and raisins. Add milk and dry ingredients alternately to creamed mixture, beginning and ending with dry ingredients. Blend thoroughly after each addition. (With electric mixer, use slow speed.) Pour into well-greased and lightly floured 13 by 9 by 2 inch pan. Bake in moderate oven (350 degrees Fahrenheit) 30 to 35 minutes. Drip orange juice (about 1/3 cup) over warm cake.

Sprinkle with topping made by mixing 1/4 cup sugar, 1 teaspoon cinnamon, and 1/4 cup walnuts, chopped. Decorate with orange slices.

Before announcing the winners, the Duchess declared that there was one thing "we all have in common—we've all cooked a meal for the man we love."

Five women from the Washington area were entered. All of them won General Electric ranges and mixers in a preliminary contest. The local contestants and the baked goods they prepared at the Waldorf Monday are: Mrs. Marian Wells, Washington, French cookies; Mrs. Grace Hale, Arlington, Chiffon nut pie; Mrs. Michael J. Ingelido, Falls Church, peanut bars; Mrs. John Lockley, Arlington, dinner rolls, and Mrs. Arthur J. Solga, Arlington, almond cookies.

Family Living

Guests, Visits Vital in Home Life

This is the third in a series of six articles on the factors promoting successful family living. It is reprinted with permission from the Annals of the American Academy of Political and Social Science for November, 1950.

By James H. S. Bossard, Eleanor S. Boll and Winogene P. Sanger

FAMILY ENTERTAINMENT of guests, and visiting in other homes in turn, constitute an important part of the life of many families. Authors of autobiographies who write of their own family lives, either of childhood experiences or of the marital relations of their parents or themselves, devote much space to the subject of guests and of visiting.

Perhaps the reader will agree that many of his or her own most abiding and meaningful family life experiences have been of this kind. But here again one finds that almost no attention has been given to this phase in the literature of family life.

Our own studies reveal a wide range of family consequences. The coming of guests may precipitate family planning and behavior as a group: a family conspiracy to appear to be what it ordinarily is not, but perhaps would like to be; or a concerted effort to deal with a guest with harshness or with humor. Experiences with guests often become a part of the family heritage: "do you remember when so-and-so stayed here that weekend?"

Or the guests lift the family out of the doldrums, infusing new life and enthusiasm into relationships and routines that have begun to pall. Again, with the coming of guests, members of families reveal themselves to one another: father acts foolishly with that young blonde; mother's fawning attitude toward Mrs. Smith obviously belies her constant critical comments about her.

ENTERTAINING becomes at times an enjoyable family enterprise; elsewhere and on other occasions, it is the time when one member indulges a selfish interest or turns foolish or unpleasant. It may be exploited for business or professional purposes, or it may be reserved for delightful variations in the family program. It may be overdone, turning the home into a miniature Grand Central Station; or it may be a controlled and selective expression of family group values. At any and all events, family entertaining is an aspect of family living which may contribute to family unity and stability, or it may become a factor in the creation or intensification of its conflicts and disorganization.

Family visiting is a complementary phase of family living. A recent study initiated by the senior author, while not yet complete, casts the shadow of forthcoming conclusions. The study covers thus far a total of thirty-four cases, ranging in age from 19 to 27; and includes past experiences and impressions resulting from the role of guest in someone else's home.

THREE Conclusions may be noted briefly. About half the cases definitely reported that they had gained an insight into other families—their pretenses, social ambitions, ways of rearing children, husband-wife relation, and various oddities in family living.

Another group were led, through seeing other families in action, to a greater appreciation of their own families. They concluded, as a result of such visits, that their own home life was more pleasant, and that their own family members were better-mannered or more intelligent or more considerate than those whom they had visited.

Finally, there were those who, through contact with other families, were made aware of deficiencies in their own background. In some cases such awareness was accompanied by discouragement; in others, by determination to improve things in their own family setting.

Will you spend less than 1¢ to make a $5.00 roast taste better?

Now—for less than a penny a meal—enjoy more meat flavor in meat . . . more chicken flavor in chicken . . . more good, natural flavor in all kinds of food! Now, discover the dramatic difference that a touch of Ac'cent makes!

For Ac'cent is the new, master seasoning that heightens the fine flavor . . . holds the fine flavor . . . of almost everything you cook. Ac'cent is a pure vegetable substance that adds no flavor or aroma of its own. Yet, remarkably, it brings out and intensifies the natural flavors already in foods!

Until recently, Ac'cent has been almost a trade secret of leading chefs and gourmets who have known it, used it, and praised it. Now you can get Ac'cent at your local food store . . . in handy, inexpensive kitchen shakers, with full instructions for use.

Experiment first with one of your favorite recipes. We promise you—you'll never know how much good flavor familiar dishes really have until you taste some seasoned with Ac'cent! Ask for a shaker of Ac'cent today. It's like no other product on your grocer's shelves!

Debbie Reynolds Bound for Capitol

By Richard L. Coe

PEOPLE AND PLACES: Debbie Reynolds and Carleton Carpenter, the cute mite and gangly guy of "Three Little Words" and "Two Weeks With Love," will be headlining the stage bill at the Capitol for 12 days starting the 30th, after the spot has had 10 days of Her Nibs Georgia Gibbs . . . Another coming Capitol headliner will satisfy those scrawls on the white walls leading to the stage door which read: "We want Bill Lawrence." . . . Whoever wrote that will have her wish gratified when Bill gets here heading Art Godfrey's Talent Scout unit January 11.

EDWARD ARNOLD'S two-week stand at the Gayety in Walter Huston's last stage vehicle, "Apple of His Eye" will bring out a lot of folks who remember when he was leading man of Steve Cochran's National Theater Players . . . Most-fascinating-idea-for-a-doctor's-theses-to-come-this way: Caspar H. Nannes' just published "Politics in the American Drama as Revealed by Plays Produced on the New York stage, 1890-1945." . . . Congratulations to the newsman for what looks to be a most instructive and provocative job of research.

THE FOUNDRY PLAYERS turned advance voices for Gian-Carlo Menotti's "The Consul" at the Gayety, by presenting his light anecdote, "The Telephone," most acceptably for the Washington Theater Alliance get-together at Arena Stage; Sandra "Miss Washington" Stahl and John Walser played the roles with humor and vocal charm, just the thing for a wintry afternoon . . . Marlene Dietrich getting set for another Western movie; she'll wear the same costumes she had in "Destry Rides Again," her measurements being the same 11 years later . . . Vicki Cummings back from the Coast for a turn on Theater Guild of the Air next Sunday in "Boomerang." . . . Robert Taylor beat his own postals back to the States from Rome, where "Quo Vadis" has been finished after months of labors.

T. BANKHEAD nervous and jittery, reports W. Langford from New York, before the first of her lecture series . . . John Rosenfield's review in the Dallas News declares she "captured another sector of the entertainment world" last week, that she chain-smoked while talking, stopped once for a sip of water from a painted tumbler that looked, from the fifth row, garnished with orange peel and lemon. "I'll bet you think it's gin," John quotes her, "and I wish it were" . . . Peripatetic Maynard Owen Williams drops by Bess Schreiner's Theater Guild office to talk theater and of how far behind is Turkey in the American movies it sees.

..CUBAN CORRESPONDENT G. Lawrence reports on a fantastic movie house miles out of Havana that's "twice as big as the Music Hall, where there were two American films with Spanish dialogue that never matches the lip movements; Betty Grable was singing 'My Blue Heaven' like crazy and what came out of the sound track sounded very much like 'La Cucaracha.' After that came a long stage show with one of the lovelist-looking singers I've ever seen, don't know her name. All this for 60 cents with a huge bar and restaurant right in the lobby."

THIS SATURDAY seems to be Children's Day all over: There's the Children's Playhouse of northern Virginia doing a 10:30 ayem and a 2:30 matinee of "The First Christmas" at Alexandria's GW High auditorium; seats at Shirlington Co-Op or Overlook 4376 . . . The Metropolitan Theater will have its children's show at 10 o'clock . . . The Hiser-Bethesda will be showing "A Christmas Carol," at 11, 1 and 3, with a couple of Disney shorts.

"ALICE IN WONDERLAND'S" matinees are all sold out at Arena Stage, where this special Christmas production opens a two-week run next Monday night; a big help to those disappointed at not being able to get matinee seats should be the early starting times for evening performances at 8 instead of 8:30 . . . The Arena also observes that since New Year's Eve is a Sunday and therefore no scheduled performance, it will revive "The Taming of the Shrew" that night only for a regular curtain time of 8:30.

ERRATUM, as they say: in reviewing the Plaza's "The Marriage of Figaro" this column alluded to Louis XVI's execution, so in the print shop it comes up Louis XIV, which is one more reason column-writing is a risky business.

COLLEGIANS about town are up to their ears in greasepaint . . . C. U. is winding up its production of Fry's "Thor, With Angels" . . . G. U. is doing "Three Men on a Horse," the Mask and Beuble's second offering of the year, with Joe Sickles, Mark Hogan, Jim O'Reiley and John McInerney in the cast; last performance tonight . . . G. W. plays "The Skin of Our Teeth" Friday and Saturday nights at Lisner Auditorium, with Davie Rogers, William Seabrooke and Mary Black heading the cast . . . Maryland U. is playing "Caesar and Cleopatra" all this week with Doug Williams and Joan Kendall in the title roles . . . And down at Charlotte Hall the boys are "Out-horsin' Orson" with their own "Macbeth" Friday night at 8:30.

PUNCH CONTRIBUTES. "Backflash:

to try to arrive about two fifths of the way through in order to come in at the beginning of the story. I am one of those people who loathe arriving at the cinema to find that the film started 20 minutes earlier. I used to find it so confusing not knowing who had done what or why, so I studied the times of showing and by careful calculation I was able to arrive just before the film began. Rather satisfactory you will agree, but then the people who make the films decided that the only way to tell a story nowadays was by means of a flash-back so now I have"

TIME OUT: Deborah Kerr and Stewart Granger don't have much time for this sort of thing in "King Solomon's Mines," but can you imagine a movie with two such humans sans Clinch? The eye-dazzling adventure yarn, filmed in both Africa and Technicolor, is properly breaking recent records at the Palace

. . . In New York

New York Heartbeat

Celebs About Town: Mary Garden, most famed of the opera stars, who got $30,000 for the mag rights to her autobiography. Woman's Home Companion will unveil it . . . Lily Pons, the only attraction to turn away patrons at the Met this season . . . Gloria Swanson studying the Colony menu through her lorgnette . . . Greta Garbo's familiar big black hat fighting the Madison and 53d winds . . . Dorothy and Lillian Gish, who may appear in a play together for the first time. In "The Daughters of the Late Colonel" . . . Attractive Ruth Mitchell, the only female stage manager in town. When "Mr. Roberts" tours she will backstage-govern "Anna and the King of Siam" . . . Basil Rathbone, who snubbed a starring role to lecture-tour at fancy fees . . . Mrs. Gary Cooper, one of the top beauties in the land, doing extensive shopping for her apartment, which chums suspect means a "long stay" . . . Judge F. Pecora, who has the nod for the next Federal bench vacancy . . . Al Jolson's widow, who has that refreshing home-town girlish manner.

Sallies in Our Alley: Honeychile Wilder is back from India, where she was the guest of the Maharajah of Jodhpur . . . He's the potentate who got himself in the papers wearing real diamonds instead of buttons in his shirt . . . When she was about to depart he urged her to stay a while . . . "Only on one condition," she said. "If I can do your laundry" . . . Ray ("South Pacific") Middleton's observation: "The trouble with Broadway these days is that few of the old guys are left and few of the new ones are right."

Vignette: H. M. Stevens, the popular caterer at the major league ball parks and the big racetracks, holds open house for intimates and the boys on the papers every afternoon after the last race at Tropical Park . . . At day's end in his office all sorts of money is tossed on this table and that one, paper currency in 50s, 20s, 10s, 5s and 1s (plus loose change) from his concessionaires . . . Mr. Stevens says it is only money . . . But a bottle of whiskey is locked in the safe.

Memos of a Midnighter: The FBI will offer startling new testimony in the trial of Wm. Remington on the 18th . . . The odds are 2 to 1 the High Court will not reverse the Hiss appeal . . . Judy Coplon's lawyer, Archibald Palmer (the one she fired), is offering mags "the inside story" . . . O'Connell footnotes in his up-front comment: "Walter Winchell is also passed over by Bartlett's, though phrases of his that came into everyday speech are too numerous to be listed." Thank you, but H. L. Mencken ("Mr. Words" himself) handled the sitcheeavshun in his "The American Language" years ago . . . The trouble with our President is that every time he makes a mistake he puts it in writing.

Ex-Navy Aide Commits Suicide

Henry Everett Spangler, 65-year-old retired Navy Department crane operator, was found dead of carbon monoxide poisoning early yesterday in his automobile, parked in a garage behind his home at 527 14th st. se.

Dr. A. Magruder MacDonald, District coroner, issued a certificate of suicide.

The body was found by Mrs. Charles Collins, 529 14th st. se., after a former neighbor, Mrs. Dorothy Credeur, 4244 F st. se., telephoned her that repeated calls to the Spangler apartment brought no response.

Mrs. Credeur said Mr. Spangler had failed to appear after accepting a dinner invitation Sunday night. She received no reply when she called again Monday night. Police estimated Mr. Spangler had been dead more than 24 hours when his body was found at 9:15 a .m.

Friends said Mr. Spangler, who had lived at the address for 30 years, retired from the Navy about four years ago. The death of his wife three years ago made him despondent, a condition that was aggravated by the death three weeks ago of a sister in Pittsburgh, friends told police.

Ghosts Talk Finance

NEVERS, France, Dec. 12 (U.P.).—Two spinsters were awakened at night by what they described as "ghostly voices" commanding: "Bury your money, your jewels, your gold coins under the hedge." They did. The next morning the "ghosts"—and their valuables—were gone.

Liquor Ad Broadcasts Under Fire

Area Presbyterian ministers voted yesterday to protest the broadcast of hard liquor advertising on radio networks in Alaska and Hawaii.

In a motion adopted at a stated meeting of the Presbytery of Washington City, the group—representing 43 churches with a membership of 22,000 members—scored the policy as "a dangerous precedent," and an action which "certainly will not advance the cause of statehood."

"People must make up their own minds about drinking," the Rev. James F. Lundquist of McLean, pastor of Lewinsville Presbyterian Church, declared.

"But churches have the right and responsibility to guard public media from the vested interests which take their message to the whole family in an attempt to influence the decision."

The Virginia minister who proposed the action said only recently was it brought to his attention that a certain United States liquor concern had purchased radio time on a seven-station network in Alaska, and that similar programs were being aired in Hawaii.

In other business in the meeting at Congress Heights Presbyterian Church, a goal of $150,000 was voted for a church extension program of the Presbytery.

James Sherier, past moderator and an elder of the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, announced the campaign, scheduled to run April 8 to May 28, 1951, will be directed by Dr. A. B. Keeler of New York City.

Restaurateurs Not Immune To Apple Pie

Even case-hardened restaurant men are not immune to their own products.

This was uncovered yesterday when the heartwarming aroma of fresh apple pie lured droves of hungry restaurateurs away from the shiny kitchenware exhibits of the Southeastern Regional Restaurant convention at the Statler to the hotel's banquet kitchen.

In the kitchen they discovered that there are bakers and there are bakers' bakers.

Master bakers Louis A. Weidman, 48, of Asbury Park, N. J., and Edward H. Matthews, 58, of Philadelphia, Pa., who for 20 years have made a business of giving advice to other bakers, were the men responsible for the apple pie.

They explained patiently to the restaurant proprietors why pies and pastries occasionally bring requests for bicarbonate of soda from the unhappy customers.

Matthews, a jolly, rotund gentleman, chided bakers for complaining that their cakes sometimes fall. "Cakes," he said, "only fall in housewives' kitchens. Even for the best of us, they can suffer shrinkage. That's the scientific term."

Weidman, of more serious mien than his teammate, demonstrated with finesse the art of icing cake. The restaurant proprietors bravoed.

The pair, who are baking trouble shooters for the Proctor & Gamble Co., sent the conventioneers back to their gleaming exhibits with new respect for the science of baking.

Possibly because they had been talking to men who have passed the test supreme. Mrs. Matthews and Mrs. Weidman let their husbands do all the baking in their own homes.

Children Left In Custody of Franchot Tone

SANTA MONICA, Calif., Dec. 12 (AP).—Actor Franchot Tone testified reluctantly today that he often had seen his current girl friend, Barbara Payton, in the nude.

But even so, he was permitted to retain custody of his two sons in a dispute with his former wife, Jean Wallace, whose unclothed state on two occasions was described by earlier witnesses. Both women are film actresses.

The pawns in the dispute are Paschal, 7, and Thomas, 5.

The actor said he had spent 10 days with Miss Payton in a cottage at Quebec, Canada, while the children were along. He said he has been dating her about 3 or four times a week.

Tone and Miss Wallace were divorced in 1948. Tone was granted custody of the boys. Miss Wallace recently sued Tone for custody, asking also $1100 a month for their support and education.

Part of New Road Opens Saturday

BALTIMORE, Dec. 12 (AP).—The first section of the Baltimore-Washington Expressway will be opened Saturday at a ceremony headed by Gov. William Preston Lane, Jr.

The section runs from the Baltimore City line to the Friendship International Airport. The airport is about 1½ miles east of the superhighway itself and is linked to it by a spur road. The ceremony will be near the north end of the bridge that carries the road over the Patapsco River, about a mile south of the Baltimore City line.

The Citadel Alumni To Stage Dinner Party

Area alumni and former cadets of The Citadel and their women guests will attend an informal Christmas dinner party on Thursday at 7:30 p. m. in the Fort McNair Officers' Club.

A moving picture of the recent Citadel-South Carolina football game will be shown. Reservations may be obtained by calling FA. 5299 or LI. 5-6700, ext. 73200.

41 New U. S. Citizens Are Naturalized Here

Forty-one new citizens were naturalized in District Court yesterday.

Judge Alexander Holtzoff tendered a "particularly warm" welcome to two servicemen among them, Philippine-born sailors, now stationed at the Anacostia Naval Air Station.

They are Leonardo Quebral and Alberto V. Tiangson, both natives of Lingayen.

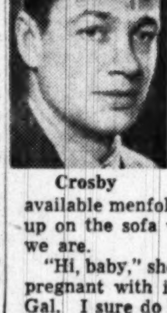
Anyway, She Can Get Rid of the Wife

By John Crosby

GEE, THE THINGS that come out of Hollywood! The latest is "Lonesome Gal," whose sexy voice is now lapping at the ears of the lonesome menfolk in New York City. (WOR 11:15 p.m., Monday through Friday). New York is the fifty-eighth city in which Lonesome Gal has been emitting her husky mating cries via the radio. That's quite a lot of territory for a gal to be lonesome in.



Crosby

"Lonesome Gal," who requires a hell of a lot of explanation, made her first broadcast wearing a mask in Dayton, Ohio, in 1947, and has kept her identity fairly secret ever since. Her special pitch is to woo all available menfolk by radio, telling us all to cuddle up on the sofa while she tells us how wonderful we are.

"Hi, baby," she intones in a tumultuous whisper, pregnant with invitation, "this is your Lonsome Gal. I sure do love you and I wanna tell you so. "So, relax, honey, you're with your gal."

RIGHT AT THIS POINT—if one believes Lonesome Gal's press agent—men from coast to coast start coming unglued. At least she gets letters to that effect and I can readily see why. "Teach me, baby—everything!" I bet she got a lot of response to that one.

On her opening broadcast in New York, L. G. unloosed a few misty oddments of biography. She's the girl, she says, who has passed me a million times on the street. (I was wondering who that babe was. The millionth time she flitted past, I had intended presenting her a scroll and a $100 War Bond, as is the custom in this country. She went by too fast.)

"I'm the gal who spends Christmas alone in museums. I've been seen in Central Park, watching people in love take a turn around the park in those romantic hansom cabs. There are millions of people like me. The only difference between me and them is that I have you . . . You're the fulfillment of my dreams."

Most of L. G.'s whisperings are cast in this form of flattery which, by radio standards, is considered subtle. L. G. is the real helpless type, looking up into your great, big, beautiful eyes and telling you what a big, strong man you are. If your ego isn't susceptible to this sort of thing; well, Lonesome Gal is a handy device—if you're looking for one—for driving your wife nuts. I guarantee L. G. can drive most any woman out of the room in a matter of minutes.

I HAVE A FEW concrete facts about L. G., if you care for them. She's 30 years old, is 5 feet 6 inches tall, weighs 125, is brunette, lives in Hollywood and, alas, is married. She also has a name which I'd rather not divulge. If she wants to keep our affair a secret, I'll play along. I don't want any trouble with her husband.

The striking fact about Lonesome Gal is not so much that she exists but that she has managed to spread this form of vicarious hashish into 58 cities. They're transcribing everything now—Bing Crosby, Grouch Marx, bird calls—but when they start transcribing sex, I say it's spinach and I say the hell with it.

Color TV Show Extended to Philadelphia

NEW YORK, Dec. 12 (AP).—The Columbia Broadcasting System announced today its color television demonstration will be extended to Philadelphia on Friday.

The five daily telecasts here of color will be relayed by network for public viewing on special color sets on the ground floor of the building at 1118 Chestnut st. in Philadelphia. The showing there will be in cooperation with WCAU-TV, CBS affiliate in Philadelphia.

CBS said the number of viewers visiting its special showroom here, where color has been shown since November 14, passed the 100,000 mark today.

The Federal Communications Commission in mid-October officially approved the CBS system of color for commercial operations starting November 20. However, Radio Corp. of America, which developed a rival system, and several other firms attacked the decision in Federal Court in Chicago and a three-judge panel issued a temporary restraining order November 15 which still is in effect. The CBS color demonstrations, consequently, have been on an experimental basis.

The DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

A Fine Idea, But Not on The Working Level

The Economic Stabilization Administration provided the largest room it had for the first joint press conference of Director Alan Valentine, Price Administrator Michael V. Di Salle and Chairman of the Wage Stabilization Board Cyrus Ching.

But reporters and kibitzers turned up in such numbers that the largest room wasn't large enough, and standees lined the wall.

W. W. "Mac" McClanahan, acting information director for ECA, noted that many of the correspondents who were standing would have difficulty in taking notes. So he started the meeting by requesting that anybody seated at the long table and not a member of the working press please get up, and make room for an honest-to-goodness reporter. Nobody budged.

James M. "Don" Minifie of the New York Herald Tribune whispered to Post Reporter Alfred Friendly:

"A classic example of how voluntary control agreements work."

POOR BUT HAPPY

"The most cheerful people in Washington seem to be the traffic cops," observes Jay Aitch. "They always whistle while they work."

"Two-month-old Manchester terriers." (Trinidad 1096 after 5 p. m.)

"Beautiful male Irish setter, 1 year old, loves children." (Falls Church 6365.)

"Black-and-white 6-week-old kittens." (Wisconsin 3379.)

"Mixture spitz and cocker, 5 months old." (Sligo 1260.)

"Housebroken, intelligent black kitten." (Jackson 2-6866.)

"What a mop of hair that woman's got. She looks like she's sponsored by the O'Cedar people."

"I'm a Grey Lady at Walter Reed Hospital, and we needed a cake to provide some Christmas Cheer for the boys," reports Celeste Riger of 829 Quincy st. nw. "Your story about the rum cakes for Sergeant Hackett of the Marines gave me an idea. Diplomatically. I let Manny Cohen at the Heidi Bakery hear about our problem. In 5 minutes he had issued orders for a special 20-pound Christmas cake, compliments of the 60 percent of Giant Food Stores' 800 male employes who are veterans . . . Ted E. Madsen of 4409 S. Four Mile Run dr., Arlington, Va., has sent congratulations to his grandparents in Utah on the occasion of their 72d (tie that one) wedding anniversary. Married in 1878, both grandparents are now 90 years old, and still active . . . Mrs. Harry A. Thompson, jr., of 1501 Pocomoke st., Arlington, Va., complains that the modern department store Santa Claus seems more interested in selling snapshots of children on Santa's knee than in listening to what the kids are trying to tell him . . . Bernard N. Siegel of the Food Fair supermarkets has lined up Tiny Meeker to serve as MC at the Christmas party being given for the patients at Glenn Dale Sanatorium by the South West Harbor Lions Club tomorrow . . . George N. Page, manager of the Seco Theatre, 8244 Georgia ave., Silver Spring, Md., is putting on his annual Christmas show Friday afternoon, for the benefit of Montgomery County's needy. You can't get in with money; admission price is a can of food or a new toy—and if you can't attend at that time, there's a container in the lobby for your gift all week long . . . Here's an unusual request: Mrs. Winifred M. J:lling of 318 Livingston ter. se. says that if you have any old draperies, pottery, vases (and especially a pair of beat up ballet slippers, the older the better) students at the Corcoran Art School would love to have them. Principal Richard Lahey explains that art students always need things to paint, and adds that if you can help, you can call Agnes Mayo (Metropolitan 3211) for details . . . Mrs. Kay Kaufman of 1553 42d st. se. (Victor 1987) tells me that the children at the Ridge Road Playschool would like to find an old piano that's free-for-the hauling "to keep their little voices in tune during their nursery jam sessions." They really start young these days, don't they?

THAT EXPLAINS IT

An article by Hope Ridings Miller in the December issue of "Promenade" may go a long way toward explaining why the country keeps going into debt.

Miss Miller writes that Washington is the place where "the Bureau of Engraving and Printing turns out $35,000,000 worth of new money every week and the Bureau of Public Debt burns up $6,983,000,000 worth of tattered bills every year."

The way I figure it, we're printing less than 2 billion a year and burning up almost 7 billion. No wonder it's getting progressively harder to borrow a 5-spot until payday.

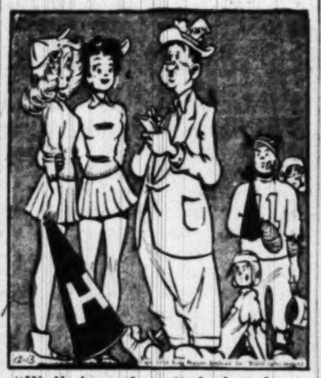
AIN'T IT THE TRUTH?

Otis A. Anderson, jr., of 834 S. Frederick st., Arlington, Va., was a resident of Prince Georges County for more than eight years before moving to Virginia, and he has a suggestion to make to the newly elected county officials. He writes:

"When the Bay Bridge is finished, perhaps they could move the ferry boats to Peace Cross."

SUSIE Q.



"Well, how does it feel to beat the toughest team in the State?"

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

'Capt.' Truman, Meet 'Maj.' Attlee

By Drew Pearson

The press of the world speculated last week about what President Truman was saying to Prime Minister Attlee during a highly secret stag dinner at the British Embassy.

Pearson

The dinner lasted until 12:15 a. m.—unusually late for Truman to be out. At the dinner were some of the most important British-American advisers—Secretary of State Acheson, Secretary of Defense Marshall, Secretary of Treasury Snyder, Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff Omar Bradley, Field Marshall Sir William Slim, Lord Tedder, Sir Roger Makins and Averell Harriman, special adviser to the White House.

After the dinner was over, those present greeted newspapermen with a blunt "no comment." However, here is what actually happened behind the sacrosanct doors of the British Embassy.

"Capt." Harry Truman, once of the United States Field Artillery, and "Maj." Clement Attlee, once of His Majesty's Infantry, spent most of the evening swapping stories about World War I. Truman served in the Missouri National Guard which was active in the campaign of the Vosges Mountains. Attlee enlisted in the British Army, was wounded at Gallipoli, reenlisted and came out with the rank of major.

Despite the presence of the top-ranking generals in the British and American Army, "Captain" Truman and "Major" Attlee devoted part of their time to cussing out generals.

War on Acheson

Here is some of the closed-door Republican debate when GOP policy-makers haggled over the question of a formal resolution to remove Dean Acheson as Secretary of State.

Taft argued that any formal Republican statement should deal with policy not personalities. Millikin also doubted the wisdom of putting the Republican Party on record against Acheson; while even Wherry, who has never hesitated to raise his voice against the Secretary of State, preferred to keep hands off a formal resolution.

"Everybody knows how I feel," the Nebraskan shrugged. "If a resolution comes out with my blessing, it will hurt rather than help it."

Senator Ives of New York, who read the text of a proposed resolution, drew sharp attack in regard to one paragraph of his statement.

"We are compelled to point out," Ives read, "That unless this change in Administration personnel which we here recommend is made, our efforts to cooperate must prove futile and national disunity and lack of confidence are likely to increase."

Millikin protested that this was an "implied threat" that Truman must fire Acheson—or else. Taft also criticized the threatening tone, and Ives agreed it should be struck out.

Millikin then remarked that the resolution would probably make President Truman "more determined than ever" to keep Acheson.

"If we have to consider the President's backbone every time we make a decision, we better give up as a party," shot back Ives.

Massachusetts' Senator Leverett Saltonstall objected to the poor timing of the resolution, while President Truman and Prime Minister Attlee were making great policy decisions. A Republican pronouncement against Acheson at this time, warned Saltonstall, might undermine British confidence in the United States.

"Let me say this," retorted Ives. "The confidence of the American people is far more vital to us than the confidence of any other nation."

The New York Senator added that he had high regard for Acheson's intellectual capacity, but deplored his poor judgment. Ives cited Acheson's famous cracks that he would not turn his back on Alger Hiss and his description of Senator Taft as a "re-examinist."

Most rabid at the closed-door meeting was Senator Hickenlooper of Iowa, Senator McCarthy's Little Sir Echo, who not only wanted to purge Acheson but also to revamp the entire State Department.

"Getting rid of Acheson isn't enough," snorted Hickenlooper. "That wouldn't reach the fellows underneath who are responsible for most of Acheson's decisions."

New Jersey's Senator Alex Smith agreed with "Hick" and urged making the resolution bipartisan by soliciting some Democrats "who think along the same lines."

Advice on Korea

Few Congressmen have carried greater weight at the White House in recent years than venerable, white-thatched Adolph Sabath of Illinois, dean of the House of Representatives. Sabath, who will be 84 in April, was a great favorite of Franklin Roosevelt, while Harry Truman has also left the White House door wide open to Sabath any time he wants to call.

It remains to be seen, however, whether Truman will follow the latest advice given him by his old friend.

"Mr. President," advised Congressman Sabath, "I hope everything possible will be done to bring about an adjustment of this war, even if we have to yield a little to restore peace. I get a great many letters from mothers and fathers of boys in the service and they do not want this great loss of life to continue."

Truman replied that while he could not condone the Chinese Communist aggression, he would do everything he could to bring about a settlement of the war.

He said he knew how those fathers and mothers felt and he wanted peace as much as they did. The President told Sabath that if Russia felt the same way, there would be no war now, and that maybe we could still work it out.
